

J. S. HELIOS

THE

FINAL COUNTDOWN

WHAT ISAAC NEWTON FAILED TO DISCOVER

SECOND EDITION - COMPACT VERSION

Copyright © 2014 by J. S. Helios
www.jshelios.com

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced or transmitted in any form or by any means, electronic or mechanical, including photocopying, recording or any information storage or retrieval system, without prior permission in writing from the author.

João Helios F. Silva (J.S. Helios) asserts the moral right and intellectual property right to be identified as the author of this work.

First published in Portuguese 2012.
This edition in English 2014.

Author: J. S. Helios
Design by: Wellington Consoli
Copydesk by: Claudia N. Barbosa

ISBN: 978-85-8196-564-2

Second Edition - Compact Version

CONTENTS

Introduction.....	07
01 - The Prophecy of St. Malachy	09
02 - The Hidden Prophecy of the Basilica of St. Paul outside the Walls	15
03 - Warning Signs.....	23
04 - The Prophecies of Hollywood	29
05 - Is Barack Obama the Reincarnation of Abraham Lincoln?.....	35
06 - The Nemesis Star: the Punishment of God.....	43
07 - First Effect of Nemesis on Earth: Impact of Asteroids.....	53
08 - Second Effect of Nemesis on Earth: Reversal of the Magnetic Poles.....	57
09 - Third Effect of Nemesis upon the Earth: Displacement of the Geographic Poles	63
10 - The Prophecy of Leonardo Da Vinci	69

11 - The Effect of Nemesis on Venus..... 75

12 - The Wrath of God in 2016 - Correcting Joachim of Fiore 79

13 - The Wrath of God in 2016 - The time of God. Why 1260 is really 2016..... 83

14 - The Prophetic Manuscripts of Isaac Newton..... 87

15 - The Wrath of God in 2017 - What Isaac Newton Failed
To Discover..... 91

16 - The Beginning of the Messianic Era in 2018 99

17 - The End of the Papacy in the Catholic Church in 2019 105

18 - The Return of Sedna 109

19 - Secrets of Orion 119

20 - Jesus’s Prophecy of a Global Catastrophe..... 125

21 - Jerusalem, the Future Capital of the World 133

Conclusion 139

Appendix - Guide to preparing for a global catastrophe..... 151

INTRODUCTION

“The Earth will become desolate because of its inhabitants, as the result of their deeds.”

(Micah 7:13).

If you saw someone walking distractedly towards an open manhole, what would you do? Warn him of the approaching danger, or simply keep watching, hoping that he doesn't fall into the hole? When we see that someone is in danger, it is our duty to warn that person of the danger, even if there is a possibility we might be wrong.

Throughout the Bible there are predictions of a terrible future catastrophe, described as either The Wrath of God or the Day of the Lord. It refers to a planetary cataclysm which will bring about the end of our world, a world filled with violence, war, illness, poverty, selfishness and racial and religious intolerance, and bring about a new world of peace and prosperity. Jesus also foresaw the coming of this new era, which he called the Kingdom of God.

There is a general feeling among people today that something is about to happen to the world. This concern was recently expressed in the interpretation of the Mayan prophecies, and the end of the 13th Baktun of the Mayan calendar. In the end nothing happened on December 21, 2012, but the feeling remains that the judgment of humanity, and the fulfilment of the predictions of the Book of Revelation are imminent.

This book is the result of four years of study of a number of prophecies, most notably those found in the Bible. The conclusion is, at the very least, uncanny. Isaac Newton studied the Holy Scriptures and discovered a year that he believed to be of major significance: 2060. However, he may have been mistaken in his interpretation of the verses, and the year that he spent so long seeking may, in fact, be 2017. This is because he used the year 609 in his calculations, when he should instead have considered the year 609 B.C. The warning must be given now, even if the nature of the danger itself cannot yet be confirmed, because if this book is right, then soon it will be too late to do anything. Governments and the authorities need to prepare themselves, to save lives, and to preserve the technological, scientific and cultural knowledge of the human race.

01

THE PROPHECY OF ST. MALACHY

St. Malachy has been much discussed in recent years, thanks to his well-known prophecy regarding the popes. This takes the form of a list comprised of 112 entries written in Latin, each one corresponding to the 112 papacies from Pope Celestine II (1143-1144) to Pope Francis, the last on the list, and includes the 10 antipopes during the period. St. Malachy was born into a wealthy family in Ireland in 1094. Since his adolescence he was drawn to the religious life, becoming the deacon of the Bishop of Armagh while still young. In 1120, at age 25, he received his ordination to the priesthood and soon after was transferred to the diocese of Bangor, becoming abbot of the most austere monastery in Ireland. In 1125, Malachy was named Bishop of Connor, but was forced to leave the town when war broke out in the region. When he was 45, Malachy travelled to Rome, where he received the title of archbishop from Pope Innocent II. His final years were spent in the Clairvaux Cistercian Monastery, in the company of his friend and biographer, St. Bernard, who describes in his book the prophetic gifts, miraculous cures and even resuscitations performed by the Irish bishop. St. Malachy died on the exactly the same day as he had prophesized, November 2nd, 1148, and was canonized in 1199 by Pope Clement III.

Before it was published for the first time in 1595, the Prophecy of the Popes had remained undiscovered for more than 400 years - not even St.

Bernard referred to the list in his biography of St. Malachy. There are two versions of the history of the prophecy. One is the version contained in the book Prophecies of the Successions of the Popes written by Abbot Cucherat in 1871. According to Cucherat, St. Malachy wrote the prophecy in Rome between 1139 and 1140, when he visited Pope Innocent II to bring news of his diocese and receive the title of Archbishop. The pope would have saved the manuscript in the Vatican archives, where it was forgotten until its discovery in 1590. The other version suggests that the list of popes was found in the Monastery of St. Benedict in Mantova, Italy, also in 1590, by the Benedictine monk Arnold de Wyon. In 1595, the monk edited a book entitled Lignum Vitae (Tree of Life), which consisted of a historical account of the lives of several Benedictine monks who were elevated to episcopal office, among them St. Malachy. After describing a number of episodes from the life of the Irish saint, the author added: “He wrote a number of pamphlets. Until now I have not had the opportunity to read these, except for a prophecy related to the sovereign pontiffs. As it is very short, and as far as I know, has not been published before, and as many would enjoy reading it, I have copied the text here.” In this way St. Malachy’s Prophecy of the Popes appeared for the first time. We will discuss only the last two popes on the list of St. Malachy’s prophecy.

De Gloria Olivae (The Glory of the Olive). Benedict XVI chose this name to honor St. Benedict of Nursia (480-547), founder of the Benedictine Order and the patron saint of Europe. The Benedictine or Olivetan Order takes the olive tree as its symbol, but the name may also be interpreted as a warning of the current need to strive for world peace. In Christian and Jewish mythology, the white dove is the symbol of peace. The origin of this interpretation lies in the Book of Genesis. After the flood, Noah released a dove, hoping to find solid ground. The dove returned with an olive branch, showing Noah and his family that they would soon be able to settle, once again, on dry land. The dove and the olive branch meant that the destruction caused by the flood had ended.

On February 11th, 2013, Pope Benedict XVI surprised the world by announcing that he was to resign. Claiming that he was too physically and mentally frail to fulfill his responsibilities, Benedict XVI was only the fifth pope in history to resign the Chair of St. Peter. Before him, Benedict IX, Gregory VI, Celestine V and Gregory XII also resigned. The papacy of Benedict XVI was the ideal time for the world to find peace. With the election of his successor, the last pope in the prophecy, something terrible could be about to strike the world.

Petrus Romanus (Peter the Roman). During the two millennia of the history of the Catholic Church, no pope has adopted the name of Peter as a sign of respect and veneration for the apostle who received the task of forming the Catholic Church from Christ. Not even Popes John XIV (983) and Sergius IV (1009), whose baptismal names were Peter, used the name of the first pope. According to tradition, the name of the apostle who founded the Catholic Church should be reserved for him alone. Following this logic, one can think that the last pope on the list will also be the first pope in a new era for Catholicism. The use of the name Peter the Roman suggests that the Catholic Church should return to the earlier days of Christianity, when the Christian community represented a coming together of humble men who sought to practice the Gospel as Jesus taught it.

Elected on March 13, 2013, it is unlikely that the Argentinian cardinal Jorge Mario Bergoglio was thinking of the prophecy of St. Malachy when he chose the name Francis, but instead, of St. Francis of Assisi (1182 - 1226). It was a reference to the simplicity, and devotion to the poor, to which the saint dedicated his life. He had a vision of the name soon after his election, while in the Sistine Chapel, when the archbishop emeritus of São Paulo, Cláudio Hummes, said to him: “Do not forget the poor.”

There are three curious coincidences connecting Pope Francis to the name Petrus Romanus. 1- St. Francis of Assisi, the patron saint of Italy (the capital of which is Rome), was also named Peter, as his full name was Francesco Giovanni di Pietro Bernardone. 2- Pope Francis is the only pope to have visited St. Peter’s Tomb. On April 1st, 2013, the Pope descended into the crypt of St. Peter’s Basilica and prayed silently in front of the tomb that contains the mortal remains of the first pope of the church, discovered in 1950. 3- On May 29th, 2013, during an impromptu speech to a crowd in St. Peter’s Square, Francis said: “The pope also has many sins, but when we recognize our sin, we find God’s mercy. God always forgives. Let us not forget that.” Francis was the only pope to admit that he has sinned, and such a fact, unprecedented in the history of the church, takes us back to St. Peter, who denied knowledge of Jesus three times.

St. Malachy made the following prophecy in relation to the last pope: “In the final persecution of the Holy Roman Church, Peter the Roman shall reign, and shall feed his flock amid many tribulations. After this, the city of seven hills (Rome) will be destroyed and the terrible judge will sit in judgment of his people.” According to St. Malachy’s prophecy, Pope Francis will be the last pope. However, this will not represent the end of the Catholic Church, but simply the end of the papal hierarchy and of a cycle of the history of Catholicism. It is certain that something serious must happen for this centuries-old tradition to be interrupted.

According to St. Malachy, during the papacy of Francis, Rome “will be destroyed and the terrible judge will judge his people.” God is not the terrible judge, as he is in fact the symbol of utmost kindness, but the instrument that He will use to judge the world will be terrible indeed. It will be in the form of a star that will strike the world, as will be explained later, causing great destruction across the planet. And according to the Irish saint, as Rome will not be spared, neither will the Vatican.

After his election, Pope Francis greeted the huge crowds of the faithful that awaited him in St. Peter’s Square and said: “It seems that that my cardinal friends went to the end of the world to find a pope, but here we are.” Of course he was referring to the distance to his home country of Argentina, but could it be that there is a hidden message revealing that the “end of the world” will happen during his papacy? As such, the prophecy of St. Malachy reveals to us that, in the coming years, major events will affect both the Catholic Church and our planet.

02

THE HIDDEN PROPHECY OF THE BASILICA OF ST. PAUL OUTSIDE THE WALLS

The Basilica of St. Paul Outside the Walls is the second largest Catholic basilica in Rome, smaller only than the Basilica of St. Peter in the Vatican. It was constructed by order of the Emperor Constantine (272 - 337) in the spot where, according to Christian tradition, the tomb of St. Paul lies. This may well be true, as in 2006 a tomb was discovered under the high altar of the basilica, containing mortal remains which, when tested using carbon-14 dating, were identified as being from the 1st or the 2nd centuries. The basilica is beautifully decorated, with portraits of all the popes of the Catholic Church set within circular medallions, arranged in chronological order on the internal walls of the transept, the central nave, and the two side naves. The walls are completely filled, with the only space remaining on the wall of the right nave. ¹

According to Daniel Réju, author of Les prophéties de saint Malachie, the location has the exact number of distiches needed to hold portraits of all the popes until the last pontiff on the list of St. Malachy, Peter of Rome. However, it can be seen that after Pope Francis, six empty medallions remain, contradicting the prophecy of St. Malachy. But there is a reason for these empty spaces, which should in fact be filled, as will now be explained. ²

The list of St. Malachy includes ten antipopes, the portraits of some of whom should be featured among the medallions of the basilica, but they are not. Throughout the history of the church, there have been a number of individuals who have claimed the title of pope for themselves, opposing another, established pope. The antipope is not a pope that is opposed to the Catholic faith, but someone who for a variety of historical reasons, claims the right to be the pope for himself. Tribute has been paid to some of these antipopes in the Basilica of St. Paul, such as Felix II (355-365) and Benedict X (1058-1059). The presence of Felix II on the official list of popes was debated during the papacy of Gregory XIII (1572-1585). Hoping to obtain some form of divine assistance over whether to include Felix II or not, it was decided to open his coffin, where the words “Pope” and “Martyr” were found written on his body. In his portrait in the basilica, “St. Felix II” is found between Pope Liberius and Pope Damasus.

The list of the prophecy of St. Malachy contains ten antipopes, with the portraits of two of these included in the papal sequence in the basilica. These are the antipopes Alexander V (1409-1410) and John XXIII (1410-1415) ³. The antipope Nicholas V (Pietro Rainalduccio, 1328–1330) was made pope by the Emperor Louis IV of the Holy Roman Empire, but had no ecclesiastic titles. He was merely a religious man. The other antipope, the last recognized as such by the church, was Felix V (Amadeus VIII, the Duke of Savoy, 1439-1449), who was chosen by the meeting of bishops during the 17th Council of Basel, Ferrara and Florence between 1431 and 1445. He was a nobleman who had never studied theology and was not even especially religious. He was often ridiculed by people when seen in his papal robes. These two were more false popes than antipopes. As such of the ten antipopes on the list of St. Malachy, only six remain, which is exactly the number of empty spaces that need to be filled to conclude the list of popes.

Two historic moments were responsible for the appearance of the final antipopes to be recognized by the Church. With the death of Pope Adrian IV (1154-1159), the cardinals were divided in their choice of a new pope. One group voted for Cardinal Orlando Bandinelli, who became Pope Alexander III (1159-1181), but another group of cardinals chose Cardinal Ottaviani de Montecelio, who became Pope (Antipope) Victor IV (1159 -1164), and lived in Viterbo. Upon his death, the dissident cardinals elected his colleague Guido de Crema Pope (Antipope) Paschal III (1164-1168). Following the death of Paschal III the Abbot of Stuma was elected his successor, becoming Pope (Antipope) Callixtus III (1168-1178). With the death of Callixtus III, attempts were made to elect a successor, but the Pope of Rome, Alexander III, managed, through bribery, to end the papal schism. These three antipopes were priests and cardinals legitimately elected by cardinals of the church. Therefore, their portraits should be on the walls of the catholic temple, and yet they are not.

The second papal schism was that of Avignon, between 1309 and 1377, when the residency of the pope was transferred from Rome to the French city. It all began when King Philip IV (Philip the Fair) of France (1285-1314) entered into conflict with the Vatican because of taxes being levied upon French churches. The pope at the time was Boniface VIII, but, with his death, the French cardinal Bertrand de Got Raymond was elected, becoming Pope Clement V (1305-1314). In 1309, the French king forced the Pope to transfer his residence to the city of Avignon, beginning the period of what was known as the Avignon Papacy, which lasted for six more pontiffs (John XXII, Benedict XII, Clement VI, Innocent VI, Urban V and Gregory XI). Pope Gregory XI eventually returned the papacy to Rome, but died a year later.

The conclave was held, and due to intense pressure from the people, the Italian archbishop Bartolomeo Prignano was elected, becoming Pope Urban VI. The cardinals that elected the pope hoped that he would return to Avignon. Perhaps some kind of agreement was made, but if it was, Urban VI decided not to honor it, and remained in Rome. The cardinals of the church, especially the French, revolted against Urban VI and began to plan his substitution. Five months later, the College of Cardinals formed another conclave and elected the French cardinal Robert of Geneva, who took the name Clement VII, as pope. From this moment on, the period in papal history known as the Western Schism began, when the Catholic Church had two popes: Urban VI, in Rome, and Clement VII, in Avignon, who came to be known as an antipope. The successor of Clement VII was the Spanish cardinal Pedro de Luna, who became Antipope Benedict XIII (1394 -1423). He was elected with a commitment to resolve the schism within the Church in a diplomatic manner with the Vatican, but became so accustomed to power that he refused to collaborate with the plan, enraging the cardinals.

In 1409, the pope in Rome was Gregory XII (Urban VI, Boniface IX and Innocent VII were his predecessors). The Antipope Benedict XIII remained in Avignon. So, in the year of 1409, the cardinals met in council in the city of Pisa and elected Cardinal Pietro Filargi da Candia, Pope Alexander V, and deposed the two previous popes (Gregory XII, in Rome, and Benedict XIII in Avignon), who were still disputing power. As such, in this period, the Catholic Church had three popes: Gregory XII, in Rome, Benedict XIII in Avignon, and Alexander V, in Pisa. When Alexander died, he was succeeded by Pope (Antipope) John XXIII (Cardinal Baldassare Cossa).

The end of the Western Schism occurred with the Council of Constance (1414 - 1418) which deposed the antipope John XXIII and accepted the resignation of Gregory XII in favor of Cardinal Otto de Colonna, who became Pope Martin V. One of the resolutions of the Council of Constance included the deposing of the antipope of Avignon, Benedict XIII, but he refused to accept this decision. Following his death, the last antipope of Avignon, Clement VIII (1423-1429), was elected, and agreed to abdicate in favor of Martin V.

The antipopes Alexander V and John XXIII were elected to lead the Catholic Church in the city of Pisa, in opposition to the popes of Rome and Avignon and, despite being considered Antipopes, were honored in the Basilica of St. Paul Outside the Walls. However, as with the antipopes of Viterbo, the antipopes of Avignon were also legitimately elected by other cardinals, and so have the right to be represented with papal medallions in the Basilica of St. Paul. Yet this has not happened.

POPE	CITY	ANTIPOPE	CITY	ANTIPOPE	CITY
First Schism
Alexander III	Rome	Victor IV	Viterbo
Alexander III	Rome	Paschal III	Viterbo
Alexander III	Rome	Callixtus III	Viterbo
Alexander III	Rome	end of papal schism
Western Schism
Clement V	Rome
Clement V	Avignon
John XXII	Avignon
Benedict XXII	Avignon
Clement VI	Avignon

POPE	CITY	ANTIPOPE	CITY	ANTIPOPE	CITY
Innocent VI	Avignon
Urban V	Avignon
Gregory XI	Avignon
Gregory XI	Rome
Urban VI	Rome
Urban VI	Rome	Clement VII	Avignon
Urban VI	Rome	Benedict XIII	Avignon
Gregory XII	Rome	Benedict XIII	Avignon	Alexander V	Pisa
Gregory XII	Rome	Benedict XIII	Avignon	John XXIII	Pisa
Martin V	Rome	Clement VIII	Avignon
Martin V	Rome	end of papal schism

The explanation for the six empty medallions can thus be seen. Three medallions should be occupied by the Antipopes Victor IV, Paschal III and Callixtus III, who led the church of Viterbo (1159-1178), with the other three medallions reserved for the Antipopes of Avignon, Clement VII, Benedict XIII and Clement VIII. These six antipopes were cardinals of the church, elected by cardinals, and supported by the faithful of various European kingdoms. Moreover, it was necessary for Clement VIII to resign his position in order to end the Western Schism, establishing his importance in the church. If the medallions were filled with the portraits of these antipopes, as happened with the two antipopes of Pisa (Alexander V and John XXIII), today there would be no space left for the successor to Pope Francis, meaning the medallions on the walls reach the same ending as the list of St. Malachy. With this analysis, we can prove the prophecy of St. Malachy and, furthermore, expect a dramatic event to happen in the next few years that will transform both the Catholic Church and the world.

•	ANTIPOPES	CITY	PERIOD	MEDALLION	ROLE
1	Victor IV	Viterbo	1159-1164	No	Cardinal
2	Paschal III	Viterbo	1164-1168	No	Cardinal
3	Callixtus III	Viterbo	1170-1177	No	Cardinal
4	Clement VII	Avignon	1378-1394	No	Cardinal
5	Benedict XIII	Avignon	1394-1424	No	Cardinal
6	Clement VIII	Avignon	1424-1429	No	Cardinal
7	Alexander V	Pisa	1408-1410	Yes	Cardinal
8	John XXIII	Pisa	1410-1415	Yes	Cardinal
9	Nicholas V	Avignon	1328-1330	No	Believer
10	Felix V	Savoy	1439-1449	No	Nobleman

03

WARNING SIGNS

We all have been through unusual experiences and uncanny coincidences in our lives. Sometimes, we think of someone we haven't seen for a long time, and the next day we bump into that very same person in the street. These curious moments are hard to understand or explain through statistical hypotheses or the theory of probability, although a great psychologist of the past did try to decipher them.

Jung, in his book Synchronicity (1952), describes a coincidence that occurred during one session. He wrote: "At a vital moment in the treatment, a young patient of mine had a dream in which she was given a golden scarab as a present. While she told me of the dream, I was sitting with my back to a closed window. Suddenly, I heard a noise behind me, as if something was lightly hitting the window. I turned around and saw a winged insect thrashing against the outside of the glass. I opened the window and hit the insect in mid-air. It was the closest thing to a golden scarab that it is possible to find in our part of the world, a scarabaeidae of the Cetonia aurata species, a common rose-beetle".

Premonitory dreams are warnings of things that will happen in the future. A week before he was assassinated, Abraham Lincoln (1809-1865) had a dream which he described to a number of people. He was walking around a deserted White House when he heard crying and sobbing. When he entered the West Sitting Hall, he was surprised to see a coffin, covered with a black cloth. When he asked the security guard who the dead man was, the man answered: "It's the president."

Premonitions do not only manifest themselves in dreams. Some artistic or intellectual works, such as fiction writing, cinema or theater scripts, and musical lyrics, may bring revelations of the future that the author is receiving from the spiritual universe, the mind of God. He is creating something personal, something new, but is receiving divine inspiration of a future event. In other words, the author, without realizing it, is writing something that will happen one day. This is where the expression "life imitating art" comes from. In truth, it is not life imitating art, but art anticipating life. The future event already exists in a parallel reality, so the author of fiction is inspired by this event, which is still to manifest itself in our world. It is a form of spiritual warning, captured by the human mind and partially reproduced in the details of an intellectual work.

The winner of the Nobel Prize for Literature in 2011 was the Swedish poet Tomas Tranströmer. A psychology graduate, in 1990 he suffered a stroke that paralyzed the right side of his body and caused an aphasia, preventing him from speaking. In 1974, Tranströmer unconsciously caught a glimpse of his own future when writing the poem "Baltics", in which he wrote the following prophetic lines: "Then comes the cerebral hemorrhage, paralyzing the right side with aphasia." The illness hit him unexpectedly, yet he had already seen, from the divine mind, the future that awaited him.

Whoever saw the movie The Siege in 1998, which preceded the events of September 11th, 2001, could not have imagined the series of terrorist attacks in New York that would become reality three years later. But an important similarity between fiction and reality can be seen in the name of the leader of the terrorist group that attacks the city of New York: Ahmed bin Talal, which, curiously, has the same number of letters as the name Osama bin Laden. The film does not foresee attacks with planes, but there is not to say that the fictional work must exactly mirror the facts that will occur, as it is a work of inspiration, and depends on the capability of the author to capture the future events, whether in whole or in part, that he or she is receiving intuitively. The idea of an attack by planes may even have passed briefly through the mind of the scriptwriter, vanishing soon after, or perhaps he or she considered the idea of a terrorist attack using planes so absurd that he or she decided not to include it in the film.

Another such case occurred when Michael Jackson wrote the words to the song Morphine, where he subconsciously foresaw his own death. He wrote lyrics that warned of his own future in these verses: “He got flat, baby / Kick in the back, baby / A heart attack, baby / You make me sick baby. [...] Today, he wants it twice as bad / Demerol, Demerol / Oh God, he’s taking Demerol / Demerol, Demerol / Oh God, he’s taking Demerol. [...] You’re taking morphine, morphine, morphine.” When writing Morphine, Michael Jackson was predicting his own death without realizing it. He was receiving warnings from God about the path that he was following and where it would ultimately lead. He must not have realized that this song was a warning to himself. Life gives us clues as to the events that will take place and the prophets among us can recognize these warnings, communicating all, or part, of what they see. Authors and artists, while not prophets or clairvoyants, are capable of creating “fictitious facts” that may come true one day.

Disasters may be foreseen by some minds that, without knowing it, then produce literary works that become prophetic. The most spectacular case of this is that of Morgan Robertson, an American novelist who did not find great fame or financial success as a writer during his lifetime. He found writing difficult, and confided to his closest friends that a spiritual being with literary talent was guiding his mind, and when these moments of inspiration came, he was able to write endlessly. In 1898, Robertson published a remarkable example of a work based around premonition. The novel Frivolity tells the story of a luxury English cruise ship crossing the North Atlantic. It was the biggest and most modern transatlantic liner yet constructed, and those who built it said that it was unsinkable. Robertson named the ship in his story Titan, with many features identical to those of the famous RMS Titanic, whose tragedy would take place 14 years later.

On the night of April 14th, 1912, on its inaugural voyage, the Titanic struck an iceberg in the Atlantic Ocean, sinking two hours and forty minutes later in the early hours of April 15th. In both cases, Titan and Titanic hit an iceberg, and many passengers died because there were not enough lifeboats for everyone. Neither can the author be accused of copying the technical details of the ship as, when his book was released, not even the construction plans of the Titanic existed. This case is convincing proof that future catastrophic events can be foreseen and included in a fictional work as a form of warning to which people should listen. In the following chapter we will see how it is possible for a Hollywood movie to foresee a global catastrophe.

•	TITAN	TITANIC
Length	245 meters	270 meters
Propellers	3	3
Masts	2	2
Life rafts	24	20
On board capacity	3000 passengers	3547 passengers
Passengers on board	2000 passengers	2223 passengers
Impact speed	25,0 knots	22,5 knots
Time of collision	Close to midnight	23:40
Collision side	Starboard	Starboard
Month of journey	April	April

04

THE PROPHECIES OF HOLLYWOOD

So far, we have discovered that the Prophecy of St. Malachy coincides with the end of the portraits in the Basilica of St. Paul Outside the Walls, suggesting the end of the papacy of the Catholic Church in the next few years, with Francis being the last pope. While the possibility exists that the list of the popes was forged to influence the election of a cardinal, it may also have been inspired by spiritual forces, and as a result be an accurate premonition. Ancient Hindu wisdom teaches that: “No blade of grass moves without a reason.” The past and the future are connected, and sometimes this connection reveals itself subtly.

An example of the prophetic revelations contained in Hollywood movies appears in a scene in Terminator 2: Judgment Day. The film, released in 1991 and starring Arnold Schwarzenegger, with direction, screenplay and production by James Cameron, contains a revelatory scene foreseeing the tragic events of September 11th, 2001. Many support this prophetic coincidence as a sign of conspiracy theories of powerful fellowships seeking world domination, but this is simply not true. The scene in question shows the Terminator character (Arnold Schwarzenegger) riding a motorcycle at high speed along a narrow road, while being chased by a half-destroyed truck, driven by the villain of the film. The Terminator shoots at the truck and then speeds under a bridge, where the truck will be unable to pass, as there is a pillar supporting the bridge that divides the road in two. The vehicle is unable to brake and smashes against the pillar. The gas tank of the truck leaks and a spark causes an enormous explosion. Before the explosion, the words Caution 9'-11" can clearly be seen inscribed on the bridge. The warning is advising that the maximum height that will pass below the bridge is 9 feet and 11 inches, and was not placed there intentionally by the Illuminati. But this and other examples are spiritual warnings that alert people about events in the future. God does not form part of the universe, as He is the Creator, and the universe is His creation. Therefore, He cannot leave his rightful place and appear to us to reveal the future. Instead, God warns us through these apparent coincidences, so that a large number of people can see and decipher the prophetic messages. It is certain that, if someone was to interpret this scene as meaning that a tragic event would take place on September 11th, he would be branded a fool, but the fact remains that the warning was given ten years before the tragedy occurred.

The movie Knowing, released in 2009, with Nicholas Cage in the main role, also features a premonition scene, which paranoid believers of conspiracy theories insist contains a message from the powerful groups that aim to control the world. In the scene, Nicholas Cage, playing a university professor named John Koestler, is sitting on the sofa watching the news, worried about a tragedy that will happen in the future. With remote control in hand, he changes channel, and looks over at the clock on the table. The clock reads 11:59, and then changes to 12:00. Calmly, the character consults the list of prophetic numbers that form part of the plot of the film and changes channel. On the TV, the newsreader is talking about an accident on an oil platform in the Gulf of Mexico. In the upper right hand corner of the TV screen, a video showing the platform in flames is shown. The scene was neither mere coincidence, nor planned intentionally, but is a form of spiritual warning. The following year, the Deepwater Horizon oil platform, owned by Transocean and leased to BP, exploded on April 20th, 2010, and sank two days later, causing one of the biggest ecological disasters in history. These examples should prepare us for a prophetic warning given by a Hollywood film in which a tragic event for humanity is foreseen.

The prophetic movie in question is Deep Impact. Released in 1998, it was directed by Mimi Leder and stars Morgan Freeman, who plays the US president, Tom Beck. The story concerns an asteroid that hits the Earth, causing a disaster of epic proportions. An MSNBC reporter is investigating a possible sexual scandal involving the Secretary of the Treasury when she discovers that the supposed lover, “Ellie” is, in fact, the code “E.L.E.” (Extinction Level Event). The US president goes public and reveals, to the whole world, that one year before a large asteroid was discovered seven miles (11 km) long, moving on a collision course with the Earth, and expected to happen in a few days. In the days leading up to the fatal collision, the USA and Russia launch a spacecraft named Messiah, which tries to destroy the celestial body with a nuclear bomb. However, the mission is not entirely successful, as the explosion merely breaks the asteroid into pieces, leaving a large chunk still threatening the planet. Two days later the meteorite hits the Atlantic Ocean, near Bermuda, producing an enormous tsunami that ravages the coasts of North and South America, Europe and Africa.

Deep Impact puts a black president in the White House, played by Morgan Freeman. This is the connection between fiction and reality. Worldwide devastation coming from space during the mandate of a black American president. One of the prophetic warnings of the film was the election in 2008 of an african-american senator to the highest seat of office in the US. In 1998 no one believed that, just ten years later, an African descendant would be elected President of the United States. If anyone had believed such a possibility, it would be Senator Barack Obama himself. We do not know the reason why the writers used a black character in the role of president. Perhaps, they believed that such an occurrence was as difficult to believe as the possibility of an asteroid striking the Earth.

Another work of fiction that may represent a premonitory warning for our generation is 2012, a disaster movie released in 2009 and directed by Roland Emmerich. Again, the plot revolves around a large-scale cataclysmic event, affecting the entire planet, caused by a bombardment of solar flares that heats the core of the Earth. There are two points of interest here for our study. The first is that once again, the US president is black, played by Danny Glover. Obama was officially nominated to run for the White House against the Republican John McCain in August 2008, exactly the same month as the filming of 2012 began. As such, the screenplay and the actors had already been decided long before it was known that Obama would be a candidate. A candidate who, of course, could also have lost the following year.

Could it be that this movie was a final warning that a planetary catastrophe will occur during the mandate of a black American president? The second point worthy of consideration is the date of the apocalyptic event: December 21st, 2012, the end of the 13th Baktun of the Mayan calendar. This is the last year of the first term of Barack Obama. Could it be that this represents a prophetic warning, indicating that a global cataclysm will occur in the last year of Obama's second term?

Based on this analysis, we can see how the divine mind can reveal, through the creativity of the human intellect, a future event of great magnitude. The prophecy of the film does not just refer to a great meteorite falling to Earth, but also suggests a global catastrophe during the mandate of a black president in the White House. While the US may have other black presidents after Obama, the similarity between the names Beck and Barack in the film Deep Impact seems to suggest that the black president really is a reference to Barack Obama. Together with the prophecy of St. Malachy, who foresaw the imminent end of the papacy, the hypothesis that the Wrath of God will occur during Obama's term in office is therefore highly likely from the perspective of our analysis.

05

IS BARACK OBAMA THE REINCARNATION OF ABRAHAM LINCOLN?

Reincarnation is a natural phenomenon of life. Whether we believe or not in the reality of reincarnation does not make any difference to the nature of the phenomenon. Faith does not create something that does not exist, just as it does not make something that exists cease to exist. Reincarnation exists, or does not exist, irrespective of one's religious faith.

When Senator Barack Obama began to appear in the media, the author of this work soon began to believe that he had a strong chance of being elected president. In terms of being the first black man to occupy the White House, it is highly likely that Barack Obama could be the reincarnation of Abraham Lincoln. Months later, after some research on the internet, it became clear that a number of people, among them, astrologists, psychics and spiritualists, shared the same opinion.

Obama is not just the first black president of the United States, but he is also a pioneer, when considered in the context of western countries with mainly white populations. This is emblematic, as it represents a victory for the black minority which has for many years been enslaved and marginalized. As such, it is perfectly natural that the soul to be reincarnated as the first black president should have contributed in the past to the end of slavery and the defense of the civil rights of black Americans. The first black president in history represents the peak of the definitive realization of the liberty and social equality of the American people. A man of African descent is today the ultimate leader of the most powerful country on the planet. To be the first black president is a responsibility that could not be delivered to just any spirit, but only to that which began the process of the liberation of the black American people. Only he could have the privilege of concluding this process. This historic symbolism is the most convincing argument for believing that Barack Obama really is the reincarnation of Abraham Lincoln, the man chosen in the parallel world of the 4th dimension to be the first black president of the United States of America.

There are a number of other similarities between the lives of the two individuals, showing that the facts of the life of the same soul may be repeated in similar incarnations, where there will be similarities in character and way of life. Such a finding reinforces the theory that the spirit that is incarnated as Abraham Lincoln is the same as that which currently occupies the presidential chair in the White House. Similarities can be seen in the lean frame, the posture, and the measured form of speaking. The speeches of both men are eloquent and associated with great ideas and democratic objectives. Lincoln was a self-taught lawyer and Obama graduated in law from Harvard. Both began their public service as legislators. Lincoln kept his seat in the Illinois House of Representatives for four terms. Obama was senator of the same state from 1997 to 2004. Both opposed a war where the United States invaded a foreign country. The congressman Lincoln was against the Mexican-American war (1846-1848) and the then senator Obama was against the war in Iraq. Obama was sworn in as president in front of the nation with the same Bible that Lincoln used in 1861. Covered in purple velvet and with the sides strengthened with gold-plated metal, this Bible is one of the greatest treasures of the Library of Congress.

Obama was the only president, other than Lincoln, to use this Bible in his inauguration ceremony. This is no mere coincidence, but the spiritual universe revealing that the two individuals are, in fact, the same soul. A curious coincidence: Lincoln was the 16th president (4 x 4) and Obama was the 44th President of the United States.

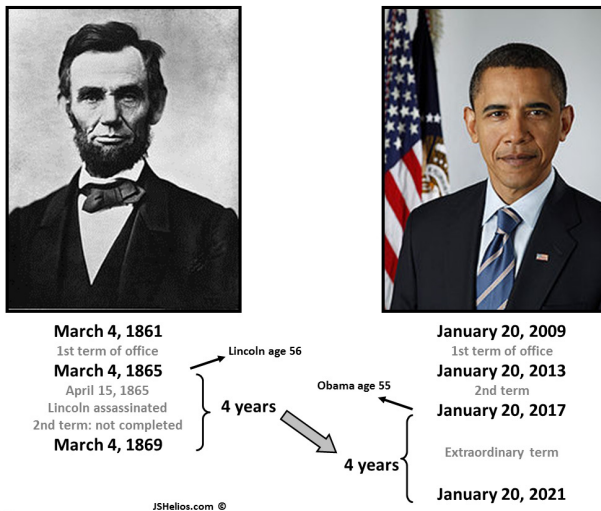

On February 4th, 1962, there was the culmination of a great planetary alignment involving the seven astrological planets visible with the naked eye: the Sun, the Moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn. These planets are found in the sign of Aquarius, and for this reason a number of astrologists believe that on this day the Age of Aquarius began, and that some important event for humanity would be confirmed. However, nothing spectacular occurred on this date. But on the day after the astrological event, the American psychic Jeane Dixon had a remarkable vision, the most important of her life, as she said afterwards. In a spiritual trance, she looked out the window of her room and saw not trees or the street, but only the dazzling sky and a desert. Emerging from the brilliance of the sun's rays, she saw a pharaoh and a queen, who she believed to be Nefertiti, holding a child wearing torn clothes on her lap. The queen lifted the child above her head as though offering it to the entire world. Then, Jeane saw the child become an adult, and a small cross formed above its head, with people of various nationalities, races and religions appearing on their knees, raising their hands in a sign of adoration. Because of this vision, Jeane prophesized that humanity would one day feel the spiritual strength of a great man who was born on that day, February 5th, 1962, in the Middle East.

It is highly likely that the symbolic figure in Jeane Dixon's vision was Barack Obama, who was not born in the Middle East, but has an Arabic surname (Hussein) and whose father was a Muslim. The fact that she had her

As has been explained, there is a great possibility that Abraham Lincoln has been reincarnated as Barack Obama. Lincoln was reelected for a second term that began on March 14th, 1865, but on April 15th he was assassinated, six days after the end of the American Civil War. As such, he did not complete his second term of office. This has a highly relevant spiritual meaning. When someone loses something that they have legitimately earned in this world, God will reward them during their lives or in another life. Assuming that someone has their property unfairly taken from them, and not by a karmic event, or in other words, as the consequence of a sin committed in a past life, then God will grant restitution for what was lost in a future incarnation. As Lincoln was unable to exercise his second term, won fairly by democratic process, after a first term that was made so difficult by the challenge of keeping the nation together, it is highly likely that he, reincarnated today as Barack Obama, will have the spiritual right to govern the country for another four years, following the end of his second term.

The American constitution, following the XXII Constitutional Amendment of 1947, does not allow three consecutive terms. Therefore, it is possible to suppose that something extremely serious will happen in 2016, so that the electoral campaign for the president to succeed Obama is suspended by Congress. This serious situation may be a global disaster caused by a star that appears unexpectedly. If the Wrath of God occurs in 2016, the majority of the planet will be destroyed and the United States, faced with an unprecedented disaster, will not be in a position to elect a new president. Obama will need to continue in his post to rebuild the country and help other countries recover. On the other hand, if in 2016 the United States are involved in a Third World War, the US senate is likely to approve, on an extraordinary, emergency basis, Martial Law or the Powers of War Law, suspending the presidential campaign in that year. If this happens,

Obama will most probably continue in command of the nation at this delicate time, which will be worsened the following year by the appearance of a destructive star that we will discuss ahead. These conjectures are only hypotheses capable of maintaining president Obama in his position for a few more years and therefore complying with the spiritual law of compensation. In the figure below, it is possible to observe a curious coincidence. At the end of his second term, Obama will be practically the same age as Lincoln was at the beginning of the second term that he did not complete. A difference of only seven months.⁵

The British historian Nicholas Boyle, Professor of History at the University of Cambridge, in his last book, 2014 - How to Survive the Next World Crisis, carried out a projection that supports the theory of our study. According to Boyle, since 1500, an important event has always taken place in the second decade of each century, which defines the global scenario for the rest of the century. He draws the attention to the Congress of Vienna (1814/1815), a conference between ambassadors of the major European powers whose intention was to redesign the political map of Europe after the defeat of France in the Napoleonic wars. Another example is the First World War in 1914/1918, which determined the paths of nations throughout the 20th century. The conclusion of Nicholas Boyle is that a large-scale event will occur around 2014, creating a global crisis with repercussions throughout the 21th century. In this way, the reader can see that our theory that something will occur in 2016 with the power to interfere with the process of electing the successor to Barack Obama has the support of a Cambridge intellectual.

06

THE NEMESIS STAR: THE PUNISHMENT OF GOD

In astronomy, Nemesis is a hypothetical red or brown dwarf star (very common in our galaxy), a companion of the Sun, which is the reason why some esoteric thinkers call the star the “Second Sun.” Scientists who defend the existence of Nemesis believe that in the universe the binary system of stars predominates, a system composed of two stars orbiting around a common mass, gravitationally linked together. The rule of the Milky Way is that of every four stars, three have at least one other companion star. For this reason, it is possible to consider the hypothesis that our Sun may also possess a companion star orbiting around a common center of gravity. When the planetoid Sedna was discovered in 2003, the hypothesis of the existence of Nemesis was strengthened, as the dwarf planet was not in the correct location. It was not close enough to be influenced by the Sun, nor far enough away to be influenced by the next closest star.

Some astronomers believe that this mysterious dwarf-star is of low luminosity and slowly follows a long elliptical orbit of around 1.5 light years, the orbital period of which would last around 26 million years. However, many scientists are skeptical about the possibility of such a long period, as it would not be long until the star escaped its orbit and became an errant star, wandering lost in our galaxy. In 1984, the astrophysicist Richard Muller published an article in Nature magazine defending the existence of the Nemesis star. Currently, he and other scientists are committed to finding further data that confirms the existence of Nemesis.

The astronomers that believe in the existence of Nemesis think that the star is in the Southern Celestial Hemisphere. This explains why it has not yet been found. The sky of the Southern Hemisphere has been little explored, mainly for economic reasons, and because there are fewer astronomers in this region in comparison with the Northern Hemisphere. This situation changed recently when telescopes capable of combing the sky in more detail were constructed. In 2007, the South Pole Telescope began to function, located in the Terrestrial South Pole, where the Amundsen-Scott South Pole Station is located, and in 2011 the largest telescope in the world became operational in the Atacama desert in Chile.

The existence of the star might explain the regular cataclysmic events that occurred in the past, such as at the end of the Permian Period, 235 million years ago, which gave rise to the era of the dinosaurs, and the end of the Cretaceous period, 65 million years ago, which resulted in the end of the giant reptiles. Richard Muller believes that each mass extinction on the planet corresponds to the return of the dwarf-star, the mass of which is big enough to disturb the gravitational equilibrium of the Solar System when it crosses the Oort cloud. Its trajectory would affect the orbits of comets and asteroids in the Oort cloud, launching many of them in the direction of the Sun. The collision of countless of these bodies with the Earth would cause the mass extinctions that periodically occur on the planet.

If Nemesis was a brown dwarf-star, it would be extremely difficult for it to be detected by instruments, as besides being much smaller than red dwarfs, such stars are extremely cold and dark. In 2011, the WISE space telescope discovered a series of brown dwarves close to the Solar System with surprisingly low temperatures for stars. In one of them, the telescope detected a temperature of only 26° Celsius. With such characteristics, it would not be impossible for a brown dwarf-star to be very close to the Solar System without being detected until today.

In Greek mythology, Nemesis was a beautiful goddess who lived in Olympus. According to the Greek poet Hesiod, she was one of the daughters of the goddess Nyx, the personification of night. In the version of Pausanias, the Greek geographer and writer, Nemesis is the daughter of the titans Ocean and Tethys, while other authors believe she was the daughter of Zeus and Themis. What all these versions of the myth have in common is that Nemesis, also known as “The Inevitable,” is the goddess of vengeance and retaliation. The mythological meaning of Nemesis is highly significant for the celestial body that bears the same name, as this star represents the “vengeance of God” for the earthly humanity tainted by sin and abomination.

Today, there is a global feeling that a celestial body will rise in the sky, putting human civilization in danger. An example of this is the film by the Danish director Lars Von Trier, Melancholia (2011), whose plot is based around two sisters that have their relationship challenged by a star that threatens to collide with Earth. This generalized concern has depth, and should be confirmed when Nemesis, also known as the death star or the assassin star, crosses the Solar System, passing very close to Earth, although in astronomical scale the distance is millions of kilometers.

The Biblical prophecies indicate an apocalyptic scenario for the Last Judgment. Something terrifying and on a global scale, affecting the entire planet. The famous centuries of Nostradamus reveal catastrophic future events in a puzzling way. They are codes registered in quatrains that were not intended to be understood at the time, but to be deciphered at a date closer to the time when the prophecies would occur.

Nostradamus

Century 1, Quatrain 46

Close to Auch, Lectoure and Mirande.

A great fire in the sky will fall for three nights,
The question will rise both stupendous and extraordinary, shortly after, the Earth will tremble.

The events of the prophetic Day of the Lord or Wrath of God were foreseen by Nostradamus. In the quatrain above, he warns that fire will fall from the sky, suggesting a meteor shower raining on Earth for three nights. The same vision appears to have been predicted by Jesus in his sermon, when he announced the surprising events that would occur upon his second coming: “The stars will fall from the sky and the powers of heaven shall be shaken” (Mark 13:25). According to Nostradamus, the cause of this phenomenon will be monumental and incredible, and we may suppose that only the unexpected passing of a star across the Solar System could have such an effect. A dwarf-star, the existence of which is believed by no one, will be the cause of the fire in the sky.

The seer names three French communes located in the administrative department of Gers: Auch, Lectoure and Mirande. It may be supposed that this means that meteorites will fall near these communes, but Nostradamus is not usually so straight with his prophecies. It is more likely, that he was referring to three particular stars, determining the position in the sky from where the fire that will fall on Earth will come. In the chapter concerning the Orion constellation, the stars which Nostradamus was thinking of when he drafted this quatrain will be revealed.

Considering that the hypothetical star has a relatively low mass, it can be concluded that its gravitational force will not have a major influence on our planet. However, the force that will make the Earth tremble, according to the words of Nostradamus, will be the gigantic magnetic field of the star, which will hit the magnetic field of the Earth, causing major changes. We can imagine this situation as two giant magnets interacting, each exercising forces of attraction and repulsion upon the other.

Our planet will be swept by windstorms, storms and hurricanes. The tectonic plates will shift, resulting in major earthquakes on land and in the oceans. Great tsunamis will form and destroy many coastal cities. In some places, the sea will not retreat, and will swallow many cities, which will remain submerged forever. Many small islands will disappear from the map, while the lower parts of larger islands will be covered by the sea. Regions and countries below sea level will be seriously compromised to disappear under the raging oceans. With the movement in the Earth's crust, countless volcanoes, some considered extinct, will become active again.

Nostradamus

Century 2, Quatrain 46

After great trouble for humankind, a greater one is prepared.

The great mover renews the ages.

Rain, blood, milk, famine, steel and plague.

In the sky we see fire dragging a trail of sparks.

Nostradamus warned that there would be a great disturbance among peoples and, soon after, another event that would subdue mankind. The first disturbance may possibly be World War III, which may or may not be nuclear. With the end of this conflict, or more probably, its interruption, an even greater affliction will strike humankind. He says that after this great disturbance the “mover renews the ages.” The intruder star is the motor, the driving force that will renew the world, bringing about a new social and world order among the nations. It will mark the end of an era and the beginning of a new evolutionary cycle for human civilization. The afflictions that people will suffer are stated in the lines: “Rain, blood, milk, famine, steel and plague”, which may be brought by storms, death, famine, destruction of human constructions and disease. In the last line, he sees fire in the sky and a long trail of sparks, which recalls the image of a meteorite in the atmosphere, confirming our theory that the approach of Nemesis will be accompanied by a meteorite shower.

Nostradamus

Century 3, Quatrain 34

When there is an eclipse of the Sun,

The monster shall be seen in full day:

Quite otherwise shall one interpret it,

High price unexpected: none shall have foreseen it.

When there is a solar eclipse, Nemesis, whose codename is “the monster” shall be seen in the full light of day. This situation can only occur if Nemesis is in the direction of the Sun, or in other words, between the orbit of Earth and Venus. A solar eclipse shall only occur when the Moon passes in front of the Sun. The light of the Sun is blocked by the Moon, with only a brilliant ring of light on the edge of its shadow. In 2016, two solar eclipses shall occur: one on March 9th, 2016, which will be seen from the islands of Indonesia, and another on September 1st, 2016, which will be seen from the African continent.

However, another, highly significant, solar eclipse will occur on August 21st, 2017, crossing the US from west to east, which leads us again to the possibility that Nemesis shall complete its destructive task in this year. According to the century, when the solar eclipse shall happen, the monster will be observed in the sky during the day. It will cause terror and awe across the world, and nothing will be able to stop its progress. At the beginning of the discovery, there will be many interpretations for the existence of the star. Scientists will suggest the possibility of a giant comet or asteroids, UFO's experts will say that it is a giant extraterrestrial spacecraft making contact with the human race, and Christians will announce that Jesus is returning with his angels. There will be universal panic. People will fill the churches to confess their sins and be hurriedly baptized, knowing that the end of the world is near. The last line says that prices will rise. This makes sense, as the demand for food and medicine will be huge. People will buy everything they can to stock up at home, as they will understand the gravity of the moment and the pain of the days to come.

Nostradamus

Century 1, Quatrain 84

The Moon is obscured in deep gloom.

His brother will pass alongside in bright red color.

The great one hidden for a long time in the shadows

Has a blade in the bloody wound.

As we have explained, Nemesis will pass between the orbits of Earth and Venus; therefore, there will be a period of transition, in other words, a moment in which Nemesis will eclipse the Sun and the Moon will be “obscured in deep gloom”. For a part of the planet, in broad daylight, it will become darkness. On the other side of the planet, it will be night, and the Moon will not be seen. The vision of the French prophet confirms what Jesus had already declared in this prophetic sermon: “Immediately after the distress of those days the sun will be darkened, and the moon will not give its light...” (Matthew 24:29). When Nostradamus says: “His brother will become bright red in color...” it may be that he is thinking of the Sun, as, from an esoteric point of view, the Sun is the masculine principle, and the Moon, the feminine principle. However, it is more likely that the seer was referring to the binary system that we have in our planet. The “brother” that passes alongside is Nemesis, the Monster, the sister star and companion of the Sun, at its side. This interpretation is confirmed by the following line that says: “The great one hidden for a long time in the shadows”. Words that are highly appropriate for a celestial body which many scientists believe does not exist, but which is only hidden in outer space, fulfilling its extensive orbit.

In the last line, Nostradamus uses an allegorical expression to impress the reader. The blade in the bloody wound refers to the great torment that humankind will suffer in the days of terrible catastrophe, as holding a blade in a bleeding wound is certainly extremely painful. When Nostradamus refers to the wound, he could be warning of the tragic consequences of a nuclear holocaust, and the blade will be the invading star, Nemesis. The pain of the wound is not enough, but there will also be an object cutting the exposed wound, not just prolonging, but increasing, the pain. The prophet seems to be warning that the suffering of these days will be intense for everyone. It will be as painful as passing a sharpened blade in a bleeding wound.

07

THE FIRST EFFECT OF NEMESIS ON EARTH: IMPACT OF ASTEROIDS

Nostradamus

Century 6, Quatrain 97

The sky will burn at forty-five degrees,
Fire approaches the great new city.
Immediately a huge, scattered flame leaps up,
When they want to have proof of the Normans.

This quatrain is normally interpreted as the September 11th attack on the Twin Towers of the World Trade Center. However, New York is not located on parallel 45, but on parallel 40 (40° 43' 0" N), and the new city is not New York, but any of today's modern cities. In the prophet's vision, he saw a very different city from the cities of his time. He saw glass windows skyscrapers, buildings with geometric designs, and enormous bridges, and understood that he was dealing with a different city, new and strange compared to the standards of the 16th century to which he was accustomed to see.

The most likely explanation is that the seer was referring to the fiery rocks falling from space at an angle of 45°, easily identifiable, as it is half of a right angle. However, another possibility is that he was alluding to the geographic coordinates, as in Nostradamus's time these were as widely known and as commonly used as they are today. The Theatrum Orbis Terrarum (Theater of the World) is considered by historians to be the first modern atlas. Created by Abraham Ortelius, it was published for the first time on May 20th, 1570 in Antwerp, Belgium. While Nostradamus had died four years before, he may have known of the new cartography, and when he mentioned 45° he may have been referring to parallel 45, which passes through France. However, the prophet may have wanted to warn that the sky over France will be filled with fiery meteorites bombing the region. In a letter sent to king Henry II of France, Nostradamus gave the following warning: “[...] such an abundance of fire and falling rocks will tumble from the sky that nothing will not be consumed.”

As for the huge, scattered flame, it may be the biggest asteroid of all that causes immense devastation where it falls, or perhaps Nostradamus is referring to the Nemesis star itself, which he saw in the sky in flames from the Sun’s reflection, and because it was also a star. In terms of the reference to the Normans, Nostradamus may be suggesting a test of faith and submission for the French coming from the north of the country, as this region, Normandy, as well as the south of the British Isles, is an area at high risk of large scale geological transformations.

When the existence of Nemesis is officially recognized by the scientific community, many mysteries will be unveiled. One of these, that greatly intrigues scientists, is the reason why the hidden side of the Moon has much more rugged relief than the side permanently facing the Earth. Due to the fact that the movements of lunar translation and rotation have the same duration, part of the surface of the Moon cannot be seen from Earth, which is why it is known as the dark side of the Moon. This side has many more craters, caused by the impact of asteroids, than the side visible from Earth and we can suppose that this side is more exposed to asteroids launched from Nemesis on its path through the Solar System. This occurs because the dark side of the Moon always faces the Sun during the new moon phase, or in other words, when the Moon is between Earth and the Sun. In this period, the dark side is struck by the majority of the asteroids travelling in our direction. It is why the surface of the Moon facing Earth has fewer craters caused by the impact of asteroids than the dark side. This hemisphere was photographed for the first time by the Soviet space probe Luna 3, in 1959, and was seen by human eyes for the first time during the Apollo 8 mission in 1968.

08

SECOND EFFECT OF NEMESIS ON EARTH: INVERSION OF THE MAGNETIC POLES

The Earth's magnetic field (the magnetosphere) is the planet's deflector shield against the highly charged particles of the solar winds, which are diverted when they get close to our planet. This field is generated in the depths of the planet by the core of iron and liquid nickel that rotates with the Earth. In part of the Southern Hemisphere, over the Tropic of Capricorn, the magnetosphere is weakening rapidly, allowing radiation from space to reach closer to the surface of the Earth. This geomagnetic phenomenon was discovered in the 1950s, and is known as the South Atlantic Magnetic Anomaly. It is a region of five million square kilometers that is constantly growing, the center of which is located in the state of Santa Catarina, Brazil, covering the whole of South America, the Atlantic Ocean, and southern Africa. Satellites, when they cross the geomagnetic fault, are directly affected by the radiation that comes from space. When the Hubble space telescope passes the same region, must withdraw its instruments to protect them from the intense radiation that is not blocked by the magnetic field. It was necessary to reinforce the protective shield of the International Space Station so that its instruments were not damaged by an electrical failure caused by a short circuit in the equipment.

Scientists do not know what is causing the geomagnetic anomaly in the Southern Hemisphere, but they have discovered that the magnetosphere is not just weakening, but reversing itself. A compass placed at a high altitude in the anomalous region becomes deregulated and does not point to the north, but to the south. The weakening of the magnetic field is the first sign of the process of inversion of the magnetic poles of the Earth and is already underway in the Southern Hemisphere.

Science has discovered that inversions of the magnetic poles of the Earth occurred in the past. The last reversal, known as Brunhes–Matuyama, took place around 780,000 years ago. We shall present here a hypothesis to explain how such a phenomenon, which the causative agent is Nemesis, can occur. The star, as it approaches the Earth, interferes with the planet’s core of molten iron by magnetic induction through the magnetosphere. The magnetic field of Nemesis has the same effect on the Earth’s core as a magnet, which moves when it is close to another magnet (if the poles are the same, they repel each other; if they are opposite, they attract).

The internal structure of the Earth is basically composed of four principle layers: the Inner core, Outer core, the Mantle and the Crust. The Inner Core is made of overheated solid metal and the External Core is overheated metal in a liquid form. The magnetic field of the Earth is generated by the rotation of the liquid metal core around the solid metal core, creating a gigantic dynamo in the center of the Earth. Scientists do not know exactly how the turbulence in the movement of the liquid metal creates the magnetic field, but Australian researchers have revealed that the rotation of the Earth’s core is currently out of synch with the rotation of the mantle/crust, according to a study published in Nature Geoscience magazine, edition May, 2013.

The fact is that, as it comes closer to our planet, the magnetic field of Nemesis interferes with the movement of the molten iron of the core, altering the momentum by which the dynamo is formed and making the axis of the magnetic field rotate 180° . Another possibility is that with the magnetic interference of Nemesis, the core itself rotates 180° , leaving it in an upside down position. When the core is displaced, the movement of the rotation does not stop, and there is friction between the core and the mantle that disturbs the convection currents in the magma. The friction increases the temperature and the pressure in the interior of the Earth and, as a consequence, the tectonic plates vibrate, and many, if not all, the volcanoes will become active, in order to release the pressure within the Earth's crust. It is an effect similar to that described in the movie 2012. The movie tells how an enormous solar storm with an intense bombing of neutrinos heats the center of the Earth, causing the displacement of the crust with apocalyptic results. Fiction apart, the plates are not going to brake as they did in the movie, but the impact between the plates will change the geography of the continents.

Once process is started, the magnetosphere will become extremely weak, and a number of smaller magnetic fields will form across the globe. As the field is out of place, the atmosphere will become totally unbalanced and countless climactic disasters will take place across the world, such as storms, hurricanes and tornadoes. When Nemesis withdraws, the magnetic axis will have turned 180° and the magnetic north will point to the south and vice-versa. Following reversal of the geomagnetic poles, the balance of the internal structure of the Earth will return to normal levels of temperature and pressure, the tectonic plates will stop shaking and the volcanoes will lie still. The Moon will not suffer from the magnetic influence of Nemesis as it does not have a magnetic field, but it will be punished by the asteroids that hit its surface.

As explained, the process of polar reversal happens inside the Earth, and the rotation of the planet will not need to stop in order to change direction. Moreover, reversal is already happening gradually in the South Atlantic Magnetic Anomaly, without the speed of the rotation of the planet being altered. During the passage of Nemesis, in the SAMA region, the magnetic field will weaken at low altitudes, near the ionosphere, but this does not represent a serious danger for human beings as the upper magnetic field is already formed and will block the majority of the electric charges coming from space. However, the same will not occur in the Northern Hemisphere, which will be completely magnetically reversed. The reversal will not be gradual or in stages, but will happen abruptly, weakening the entire magnetosphere, although this will later recover with the poles reversed.

For a number of weeks, the weakening of the Earth's magnetic field will unbalance the climate across the planet, raising the temperature of the atmosphere and the oceans, much more than the increase seen today because of global warming. Solar radiation will come dangerously close to the surface of the Earth, resulting in hotter summers, which have already been observed. This does not mean that waters of the ocean will boil, but an increase of even a few degrees will be enough to cause countless hurricanes, tornadoes, storms and floods across the world. Terrifying lightning, deafening thunders, and gales of more than 200 km/h will sweep across a great number of countries.

When the magnetosphere is considerably weakened, colored lights will be seen in the sky, the result of the impact between highly charged solar particles and the atmosphere. This phenomenon is common at the poles and is called Aurora Borealis at the North Pole and Aurora Australis at the South Pole. However, the aurora of the Wrath of God will occur across the world, causing hysteria. Many will think that Jesus is descending from the clouds accompanied by His angels or that the lights are the souls of the chosen being collected by God. Until the magnetosphere recomposes itself, people should avoid leaving home, as the solar rays will represent a great risk to health if one is exposed to the Sun without protection. If going out is needed, It will only be safe to leave the house at night. There will be many deaths because of the solar radiation and high altitudes will suffer most from these effects.

The magnetic field of Nemesis will also disturb the magnetic field of the Sun, causing the star to produce many eruptions of coronal mass ejection. Great quantities of plasma will be launched from the Sun in all directions and some may come towards the Earth, affecting the electrical infrastructure of a number of countries. Without the protective magnetic shield, electrical charges coming from space will hit substations and electrical networks, increasing the voltage of this equipment. As a result, transformers will overheat, explode, and electrical networks will short circuit. Earthquakes, tsunamis, hurricanes and tornadoes will affect the entire world and to make the situation worse, there will not be electrical power in many regions.

The blackout will not last a mere few hours. It will take several months or maybe years to replace all the transformers and other damaged electrical equipment. Without electricity, the water pumps that supply the cities cannot function. There will be no water for a long time in cities affected by the blackout. In the absence of electricity, the pumps of gas stations will not work, preventing people from traveling to safer places. Without power and fuel, public transportation will not work. There will be no trains, subways, buses, planes or ships. Without transportation, the trucks that supply the supermarkets cannot run. There will be food shortages in cities, and even famine in many places.

The solar storms will irreversibly damage satellites by burning electronic circuits. Without satellites, there will be no communication. There will be no radio, television, telephone, mobile and internet. People in different countries will be unable to communicate for some time. No one will know what is happening in other parts of the world and people will be unable to seek for help. Without electricity and communication industries will be paralyzed. The global positioning and satellite navigation system, popularly known as GPS will be severely affected, leaving aircraft unregulated and ships adrift. There will be total chaos, the true Apocalypse.

09

THE THIRD EFFECT OF NEMESIS UPON THE EARTH: DISPLACEMENT OF GEOGRAPHIC POLES

In the middle of the last century the American scientist Charles Hapgood (1904-1982) developed the hypothesis that the Earth's axis had shifted several times during the geological history of the planet. According to his argument, the polar shift resulted in rapid changes in the geographical location of the poles, causing floods and tectonic events. His arguments about the causes of the change in the angle of the Earth's axis never convinced the scientific community, because Hapgood did not consider the possibility that the cause of the displacement of the poles came from outside the planet.

The magnetic interference of Nemesis on the Earth's magnetic field is an event of phenomenal magnitude. The core of the Earth could not rotate 180° without producing an effect on the Earth's axis, and subsequent disastrous results. The axis of the rotation of the Earth is an imaginary line connecting the geographic poles, around which the Earth spins, and which is tilted at an angle of 23.45°. Some spiritual and esoteric books refer to the geophysical phenomenon of the straightening of the axis of the rotation of the Earth, approaching it from a line perpendicular to the plane of the Earth's orbit (ecliptic). This may not appear to be completely vertical, but it is possible that the angle of inclination has changed in order to become closer to the perpendicular line of the ecliptic. If the Earth was less tilted, the weather would be milder and the seasons more uniform, because the smaller the tilt, the lower would be the difference in temperature between the seasons. However, not only the Earth's axis will be disturbed, but also the location of the geographic poles will also be affected. The position of the magnetic and geographic poles is not coincidental. Nevertheless, it has been observed that the magnetic North pole is shifting more than normal. In 2007, French researchers from the Paris Institute of Earth Physics, confirmed that the speed of movement had exceeded 55 km/year and was moving very quickly toward Siberia, in Russia.

In one of his visions of the future, the well-known American psychic from the last century, Edgar Cayce, nicknamed the Sleeping Prophet, foresaw a scene of destruction and geographical changes on the Wrath of God days. He said: "As for the physical changes, I repeat: the Earth will break apart on the western side of America. Almost the whole of Japan will fall into the sea. Northern Europe will change in the blink of an eye. New lands will appear off the east coast of America. There will be an uplift in the Arctic and in the Antarctic that will cause volcanic eruptions in the torrid regions of the Earth. The poles (magnetic) will reverse, so that formerly cold or semi-tropical areas will become tropical, giving birth to mosses and fern". (Reading 3976-15, January 19, 1934). At another occasion, he said: "The land will break apart in several places. There will be a change in the physical appearance of the west coast of America. Open waters will appear in the northern parts of Greenland. New lands will be seen in the Caribbean Sea and dry land will appear. South America will be shaken from top to bottom, land will appear in the Antarctic, in Tierra del Fuego, and a narrow straight with running water will rise". [Reading 5749-15, 1934].

The visions of Cayce, like many spiritual messages communicated by different mediums, show that regions that are cold and inhospitable today will warm and the climate will become pleasant, allowing these areas to become habited. Such a situation implies the displacement of the geographic poles, which will migrate to another location, far from where they are situated today. Taking into consideration the fact that Antarctica and Greenland will melt, according to the premonitory vision of the Sleeping Prophet, we can imagine where to North and South poles may migrate. Analyzing the landscape of the globe, the South Pole may assume new coordinates close to 55° South, 120° West, in the Pacific Ocean, 3,000 km from Tierra del Fuego in the Pacific Ocean and 5,000 km from New Zealand. The new North Pole will be positioned close to the antipodean coordinate 55° N, 60° E, where the Russian city of Miass, south of the Ural Mountains, is situated. This situation does not take into account the future tilting of the Earth's axis, because we do not know how much this will be. With the proposed straightening of the axis, the coordinates will be different, in particular those of the North Pole, which will not need to advance so far into the continent, and may be positioned to the north of Siberia, near the Arctic Ocean.

An unexpected displacement of the Earth's axis occurred in the past. Around 12 thousand years ago, in its last passage close to the Earth, Nemesis gave a magnetic "shove" so strong that our planet was moved off its axis, resulting in a sharp fall in the temperature of the Northern Hemisphere. Large herds of mammoths that lived among the equitable climate of Siberia were taken by surprise by the sudden cooling of the environment. In the last century, frozen mammoths were discovered in Siberia, the meat of which was totally preserved. The remains of food could even be found in the stomach of the animals. This would only be possible if a rapid and intense fall in the temperatures well below zero had occurred. The mammoths were decimated on this occasion and many were found still standing up, possibly trapped among the swamps and lakes that froze quickly. The movie The Day After Tomorrow (2004) shows a similar situation, in which the US suffers a rapid freezing process.

The melting of the Arctic is not particularly dangerous because it is the frozen sea that will melt. However, the melting of Greenland, which is covered by a layer of ice of up to 3 km thick and with a large lake in the middle of the island, represents a possible threat to the cities of the north and east of Europe and Russia. Scientists estimate that, if all the ice in Greenland was to melt, sea levels would rise up to seven meters. Low altitude cities, or those below sea level, would run the risk of disappearing underwater. The cities that are close to the new location of the North Pole may suffer from flooding and subsequent freezing, as shown in The Day After Tomorrow, while the north of Canada will have a more tropical climate. As for the melting of Antarctica, the geographic consequences are hard to predict, but should not result in major tragedies, as the closest region, the south of Argentina (Tierra del Fuego), is largely uninhabited.

Another possible situation may occur if geological faults close to one another become displaced simultaneously. The resulting seismic shock will cause a giant earthquake with a magnitude of 10.0 or more, greater than any earthquake in history. The apostle, John the Baptist, hidden in his cave, may have prophesized this event when he said: "I watched as he opened the sixth seal. There was a great earthquake. The sun turned black like sackcloth made of goat hair, the whole Moon turned blood red". (Revelations 6:12). This apocalyptic vision reveals that at the height of the passing of Nemesis, when there is a solar eclipse, there will be a great tremor that may be a giant earthquake with a magnitude of 10.0. In another passage, he confirmed the gravity of the tremor: “[...] Then there came flashes of lightning, rumblings, peals of thunder and a severe earthquake. No earthquake like it has ever occurred since mankind has been on Earth, so tremendous was the quake”. The extent of damage from a quake of this magnitude over a large metropolis is unimaginable. Almost everything would come down and the destruction would be compared to a nuclear bomb detonation.

Something no less surprising may happen in the middle of the United States, in the Mississippi Valley. This is where the New Madrid seismic zone is located, which millions of years ago began the division of the American continent, a process that for some reason did not continue. The zone became geologically weak and began to separate the American land mass along the Mississippi River to the sea, creating a great bay. What did not happen millions of years ago may become a reality in the current decade.

10

THE PROPHECY OF LEONARDO DA VINCI

Leonardo Da Vinci (1452-1519), the incomparable genius of the Italian Renaissance, was also a talented writer, producing satires, fables, aphorisms and prophecies, written to be recited in the most elegant halls of the day. Of the writings that have survived until today, certain obscure, enigmatic prophecies require our attention, as they are enigmatic and full of apocalyptic images that suggest a terrifying flood will occur in Europe.

In contrast to what many studies of his work have argued, Da Vinci did not intend to recreate the Biblical flood as a background for a majestic painting. He did not think about creating a metaphor for the internal chaos of mankind by portraying an external scene of catastrophe and tragedy. His genius was ahead of its time, which allowed him to imagine not just modern inventions such as the submarine, the helicopter, the rotating bridge or the cannon, but also the tragic premonition of the destiny of the future generations. As well as Nostradamus, many of prophetic sentences are enigmatic and hard to decipher. However, we can understand some of them, and find that they corroborate the analysis and conclusions of this study, with respect to a global cataclysm.

The prophecies of Leonardo Da Vinci are known for their apocalyptic descriptions of a great flood. Hurricanes, storms and a dramatic increase in sea level were foreseen by the Italian genius in the following prophetic sentences: “The sea shall rise over the peaks of the mountains towards heaven and shall fall upon the dwellings of men from the clouds. It will be seen that the greatest trees of the forest shall be lifted up by the fury of the winds, from the east to the west, from the seas”. (Things relating to animals, verses 7 and 8).

“Something shall arise and shall cover those who believe they may cover it”. (Prophecies of cases or edicts or quarrels, verse 32). Something startling shall appear that no human technology can control. Attempts to remove the terrifying celestial body shall prove totally ineffective. Nothing shall deviate Nemesis from its deadly course. “Born from humble beginnings, he shall quickly rise to greatness. He will have no regard for anything that is created to oppose him, on the contrary, with his power, he will transform everything around him”. (Prophecies of philosophical things, verse 19). Initially, the discovery of the dwarf-star shall be from “humble beginnings”, as astronomers will believe they are dealing with an asteroid or comet. However, when the truth is revealed from new data about the mysterious body, the results will astonish the scientists. What was thought to be an asteroid will soon transform into a giant celestial body. No human construction shall stand in the way of Nemesis. Basilicas, castles, museums, modern buildings, factories, none will be able to resist its destructive power, turning the planet into a wasteland.

Da Vinci did not foresee only floods and deluges, but also volcanoes, spitting forth burning rocks: “Large stones from the hills shall bring such a fire that will burn the wood of many vast forests, as well as many wild and domestic beasts”. (Prophecies of cases or edicts or quarrels, verse 36). He compared the meteorites streaking across the sky to serpents attacking birds: “There will be seen at a great height in the atmosphere serpents attacking birds”. (Of irrational creatures, verse 19). The rays of the Sun, which provides the light that allows life on Earth to survive, will hit the Earth with greater force. With the magnetosphere severely weakened, and the process of polar reversal, solar radiation will become inclement, causing great damage to humans, as well as fires. “That which gives us life will descend from the sky more rapidly”. (Prophecies of the plants, verse 3). Another prophecy confirms our interpretation: “The solar rays will set fire to the Earth, which shall burn all that there is upon the Earth and that is reflected in its downward path”. (Prophecies of philosophical things, verse 31).

“Shadows will come from the east, coloring the sky above Italy with an immense darkness”. (Things relating to animals, verse 19). The Apocalypse and other prophecies of the end of the world mention the days of darkness upon the Earth, which shall take place during the passage of the dwarf-star, when it is closest to our planet. Da Vinci describes a scene of horror and desolation. Darkness, storms and floods will occur not just in Italy, but across all of Europe. The melting of the Arctic and Greenland will not just affect the north coast of Eurasia, but also the entire coast of the Mediterranean Sea. The coasts of Africa, Palestine, Turkey, Greece, Italy, France and Spain will be threatened by the violence brought by an increase in the sea level of the Mediterranean Sea, or possible tsunamis. As was stated in the previous chapter, the last pope on the prophetic list of St. Malachy is Francis. The saint predicted: “In the final reckoning of the Holy Roman Church, Peter of Rome shall reign, who shall be a shepherd to his flock amidst many tribulations. After this, the city of seven hills (Rome) will be destroyed by the terrible judge that will pass verdict upon the people of the Earth.”

Flight will be inevitable and many Europeans will escape to the neighboring continent: “All men shall seek refuge in Africa”. (Things related to animals, verse 20). Da Vinci confirmed in his prediction that one hemisphere will suffer more than the other, when he said: “All men will change hemisphere at the same time. All the animals will move from the east to the west and from the north to the meridian”. (Prophecies of philosophical things, verse 16 and 17). The displacement of animals and people will be from the east to the west and from the north to the south. This means that the damage will be greater in the east than in the west, and also greater in the Northern Hemisphere than that in the South. It is understandable that in the Northern Hemisphere the damage will be greater in terms of materials and human lives, as 70% of the land mass and 90% of the population of the world is found in this region. The richest countries are also found in this hemisphere.

Leonardo Da Vinci truly had many prophetic visions for the last days of mankind. He did not reveal his prophecies clearly, perhaps because he was unsure of whether the events that he saw in dreams and visions would come true. However, his last artistic work, the painting of St. John the Baptist, may hold a secret that only the author knows. He who preceded Christ warned the people: “You brood of vipers. Who warned you to flee from the wrath that is to come?” (Luke 3:7), and announced that the last days will come with floods: “[...] Prepare the way for the Lord, make straight paths for Him. Every valley shall be filled in, every mountain and hill made low. The crooked roads shall become straight, the rough ways smooth. And all people will see God’s salvation”. (Luke, 3:4-6). Da Vinci painted John the Baptist as a last warning. The warning is silent and expressed in the enigmatic smile of one who knows a secret. Something is going to happen that only he knows, although he is giving us a clue by pointing upwards.

He is right. The terrible judgment of the humankind shall come from the skies, and shall cause countless disasters throughout the world.

St. John the Baptist by Leonardo Da Vinci, 1513-1516.
Oil on wood, Louvre Museum, Paris.

11

THE EFFECT OF NEMESIS ON VENUS

With the discovery of the dwarf-star Nemesis, scientists shall develop the most likely hypothesis to explain the reverse rotation of the planet Venus, which has long been an enigma to scientists. Over millions of years, Nemesis has regularly passed between the orbits of Earth and Venus, passing closer, however, to our neighbor. The direction of the rotation of the planets of the Solar System is equal to that of the Earth, or in other words, in an anti-clockwise direction, when observed from the North Celestial Pole. The exception is Venus, which turns in the opposite direction, and Uranus, which rotates horizontally. Venus originated from the Sun, like the other planets, but its imaginary axis gradually moved to the south with each passage of Nemesis, due to the powerful force of the magnetic field of the dwarf-star. After suffering from this external influence for a long time, Venus literally turned upside down. For this reason, its rotation is clockwise, the opposite of the other planets. ⁶

All new scientific knowledge begins with the imagining and creation of hypotheses, which at times may appear strange and even ridiculous. Rejection of these new ideas, which we often find disturbing due to simple prejudice, is an attitude more in keeping with religious believers, who reject anything that disagrees with their own faith. But to imagine a truth before its legitimacy can be proven is a valid scientific tool. Nobody saw an asteroid falling to Earth decimating the entire population of dinosaurs. But it is the most accepted scientific hypothesis today, as there is a clear geological evidence for the theory. In terms of our hypothesis, we can cite as evidence the phenomenon of the magnetic field of Venus, which is very weak, due to the slow rotation of the planet. Over the years, Nemesis has passed extremely close to Venus, displacing its axis and slowing its rotation, resulting in a weakening of its magnetic field. At the Equator, the surface of Venus rotates at 6.5 km/h, while on Earth the rotation speed is around 1,670 km/h. The rotation of Venus is so slow that a rotation of 360°, a single day on the planet, takes the equivalent of 243 days on Earth.

Further evidence that Nemesis is the cause of the anomalies of Venus is the fact that all planets possess natural satellites, or moons, except Venus and Mercury. Even the planetoids Pluto, Haumea and Eris have at least one accompanying body. However, Venus is bigger than Mars, and has the same size as the Earth and, like the other planets, certainly used to have a natural satellite, but millions of years ago it was “kicked” away by Nemesis, and wandered lost among the Solar System. As it approached Jupiter, the expelled satellite could not withstand its gravitational force and disintegrated, forming the asteroid belt between the giant planet and Mars.

A different, but no less interesting hypothesis, may be more probable. At some point in the history of our Solar System, Nemesis moved the satellite of Venus, removing it from its orbit. The star wandered directionless through space for a time, but was soon captured by the Sun and became another planet in our Solar System: Mercury!

Two pieces of evidence support this theory. The first is visible on the surface of Mercury, which is identical to the Moon, full of craters from the impact of asteroids. Like our satellite, the Moon of Venus also received an intense bombardment of asteroids in the past and the craters of Mercury prove its origins. Further evidence is the fact that the orbit of Mercury is extremely eccentric. The perihelion (when the star is closest to the Sun) is 46 million kilometers and the aphelion (when it is furthest from the Sun) is 70 million kilometers. This indicates that the body was captured by the gravity of the Sun when it was moving, after the planets were formed. A similar dynamic seems to have occurred with Neptune's satellite. Astronomers believe that the gaseous planet must have captured Triton, which moved across the Kuiper Belt. The orbit of the satellite is progressively diminishing and within two billion years will become so close to Neptune that it will break up, forming a ring similar to the rings of Saturn.

12

THE WRATH OF GOD IN 2016 - CORRECTING JOACHIM OF FIORE

Joachim of Fiore, also known as the prophet of the three ages, was a Christian philosopher and Cistercian monk born in Calabria, Italy, in 1132, who died in 1202. Because of his reputation as a prophet and saint, Dante Alighieri, in The Divine Comedy, mentions him in Paradise in the following verses: “and shining by my side / the Calabrian Abbot Giovacchino / endowed with prophetic spirit”. His doctrine influenced the Franciscans of the Middle Ages, which are primarily responsible for the spread of Joachimism. His thinking was not based on prophetic visions, but on in-depth studies of scriptures that contain the key to predicting the final days of mankind. Joachim of Fiore interpreted and divided the sacred text into three stages of evolution that correspond to the three Persons of the Trinity.

The Age of God - the Father was represented by the absolute power of God, who inspired fear, obedience, servitude and submission, and is found in the books that comprise the Old Testament. The Second Age begins with the revelation of the Gospel and the foundation of the Church, represented by grace and the Christian faith. Based on the first chapter of the book of Matthew, which establishes the duration of the 42 generations of the Old Testament, Joachim of Fiore thought that there would be the same number of generations for the Age of God - the Son, ie, the Christian era. He believed that the transition from the second to the third age would be marked by a great cataclysm, and that after this painful transition, Christian unity would finally be achieved. He still predicted that the Jewish people would recognize that Jesus was the Messiah foretold by the prophets and the conversion of Jews to Christianity. This prediction was fulfilled with the establishment of the Messianic movement within Judaism. Messianic Judaism is a branch of Judaism that teaches that Yeshua (Jesus) is the Mashiach (Messiah) awaited in the tradition of the ancient prophets. The thoughts of Joachim about the three ages is correct. He was right about the ideas that he preached, but mistaken about one detail when he did the calculations that would predict when the new era would begin: the third era.

Fiore saw in the generations before Jesus an indication of an equal period beginning with the first coming of Jesus. In Matthew 1:17, we read: “Thus there were fourteen generations in all from Abraham to David, fourteen from David to the exile to Babylon, and fourteen from the exile to the Messiah”. Therefore there are three periods of 14 generations, totaling 42 generations from Abraham to Jesus. Joachim understood that another 42 generations would be needed for the second coming of Jesus. He estimated that by assigning 30 years to each generation, one could predict when the second era would end. $42 \text{ generations} \times 30 \text{ years} = 1260 \text{ years}$. Therefore, the third era, which he called the Age of the Holy Spirit, would begin in the year 1260. This new era was an era of universal love and equality among Christians. Also there would be none of the disciplinary rules of the Christian faith because everyone would live exactly as the Gospel teaches.

Although the new era of peace did not begin in 1260, we can calculate another date using the same idea of De Fiore. Since 30 years is not the correct length of a generation, we will borrow the symbolism used in astrology to determine how many years each past generation may have lived. Remember that the life expectancy of people two thousand years ago, through the Middle Ages to the twentieth century, did not exceed 50. Some authors claim that life expectancy in olden times was, on average, only 35 years because war, hunger and disease took thousands of lives all over the planet. Each person completed a life cycle every 12 months. This means that the Sun travels through the 12 houses of the zodiac to return to the person's house of birth. So we can consider four phases of a man's life: childhood, youth, maturity and old age, each stage being 12 years long. From birth to 12 years is the childhood. Between 12 and 24 years, the youth. Between 24 and 36 years, the maturity, and between 36 and 48 years, the old age. Remember that this reasoning is generalized in order to make the necessary mathematical calculations. Certainly, many people in the past lived for more than 50 years. However, many people also died at twenty-something years old. The age of 48 is a symbolic medium for the time to which we refer. So we have 4 stages for the human life, and each phase is equal to 12 years, totaling 48 years of life.

Now, if there were 42 generations before Christ, analogously, we will also have 42 generations after Christ, before the arrival of the third age. So, the beginning of the Age of the Holy Spirit predicted by Joachim of Fiore will be: 42 generations x 48 years = 2016. Thus, making the appropriate correction to the calculations of the prophetic Italian abbot, we conclude that the Age of the Holy Spirit and the consequent second coming of Jesus, a new world, will occur in 2016. The thinking of Abbot Joachim of Fiore is as correct as the division into three ages, but he missed slightly in terms of the time estimated for each generation.

13

THE WRATH OF GOD IN 2016 – THE TIME OF GOD. WHY 1260 IS REALLY 2016

The woman who appears in Chapter 12 of the Book of Revelation is understood by those who study the Bible to represent the Church of Christ. The passage states that the woman “She gave birth to a son, a male child, who will rule all the nations with an iron scepter. And her child was snatched up to God and to his throne. The woman fled into the wilderness to a place prepared for her by God, where she might be taken care of for 1,260 days.” (Revelations 12:5-6). The symbol of the child who appears in the vision should not be understood as representing a descendant of the Church, but as the first member of the Church. Jesus Christ was indeed the first member of the Church he founded when he invited the first disciples. The birth of Jesus is the birth of the Church, when the seed of Christianity was placed in the world. The sacred text continues by saying that the woman fled into the wilderness and was fed by God for 1,260 days. It should be understood that the woman would remain in an inhospitable, thorny place, but God was looking after her. This divine protection for 1,260 days (biblically, 1260 years) is not protection in the sense that nothing bad would happen to her, but meaning that the Church (Christianity) would not vanish or be destroyed.

The coincidence between the 1,260 year period of protection of the Church from the birth of Christ and the calculation of 42 Generations X

30 years, resulting in 1,260 years, made Joachim of Fiore believe that his reasoning was correct and that the Age of the Holy Spirit and the consequent return of Jesus would happen in the year 1260. As Christians are still awaiting the *Parousia*⁷, we can imagine that there is a secret code that gives another meaning to the 1,260 days/years of this period of the book of Revelation. The study of prophecies is not an exact science and although we use mathematical calculations to guide our thinking, this does not necessarily imply that we should follow the logic of mathematics. God keeps His secrets in the texts of the Holy Scripture, so to unlock them a kind of prophetic wisdom must be used.

Once, King Hezekiah prayed earnestly to God, because he was sick and near death. Then the Lord heard his prayers and sent the prophet Isaiah to tell him that he would grant him another 15 years of life and, would therefore, set the sundial of Ahaz back 10 degrees (Isaiah 38:1-8). In a sundial, one day is 180 degrees, which comprises to the 12 hours of the day between 06:00 and 18:00. Every hour, the shadow of the sun moves 15 degrees ($180 \div 12$). The Lord told Isaiah to move the clock back 10 degrees, meaning the shadow of the sun would return 10 degrees, and that would equate to 15 years of the life of the king. Ten degrees on a sundial corresponds to 40 minutes, but by the logic of God, the time is 15 years. What we must realize is that God's reasoning does not follow the same logic as humans.

Therefore, we can proceed with our calculations on the basis that 1,260 days corresponds to 30,240 hours. If one hour of our time equals 15 degrees on a sundial, then we can decode the hidden meaning of how long the woman (the church) will be in the wilderness until the coming of Jesus. As illustrated below, if we divide 30,240 by 15, which equals an hour, then we obtain the value of 2,016. Bible scholars know that one day in prophecy equals a year, however, in this case 1,260 days are not 1,260 years, but 2,016 years, according to God’s clock. Therefore, the time that the woman (the church or Christianity) will be in the wilderness, represented by a world full of evil and injustice, is 2,016 years from the birth of Jesus. That time is coming, and we can assume that an event with a huge impact will happen soon.

$$1260 \text{ days} = 30.240 \text{ hours} \quad (1260 \times 24)$$

$$\frac{30.240 \text{ hours}}{1 \text{ hour}} = \frac{30.240 \text{ hours}}{15^\circ} = 2016$$

$$1260 = 2016$$

JSHelios.com ©

14

THE PROPHETIC MANUSCRIPTS OF ISAAC NEWTON

Isaac Newton's contribution to the development of science is immense. In his masterpiece, Mathematical Principles of Natural Philosophy, which is written in three volumes, he explained various behaviors related to the movement of objects, the most important was the universal gravitation. Newton also wrote treaties about optics, alchemy, history and religion. His published religious work Observations upon the Prophecies of Daniel and the Apocalypse of St. John analyzes the main principles of biblical scatology. This interest in prophecies motivated Newton to create a set of mathematical calculations that tried to discover a prophetic chronology for future events predicted in the books of Daniel and the Apocalypse. These events were the return of the Jews to their ancient lands, the construction of the third temple of Jerusalem, the return of Jesus and the resurrection of the dead.

For 200 years, a manuscript containing his prophetic calculations was forgotten, together with other documents about alchemy and theology, in a metal case belonging to an aristocratic British family. In early 1936, the Viscount Lymington decided to sell all of the material to save the family from financial ruin. The auction that took place in Sotheby's that same year, did not arouse much interest due to the lack of strictly scientific material.

In spite of this, half of the lots, mainly those that dealt with alchemy, were acquired by the economist John Maynard Keynes (1893–1946). The other half, which mainly contained theological texts, were purchased by Abraham Shalom Ezequiel Yahuda (1877–1951), a professor of Oriental languages and a collector of religious texts. After Yahuda's death, Newton's manuscripts were donated to the National Library of Israel. On February 22nd, 2003, a London newspaper, The Daily Telegraph, published a report on its first page declaring that Isaac Newton had stated that the world would end in 2060. This report was based on an interview conducted by the producer of a BBC documentary about Newton, which had aired one month previously, when Newton's prophetic manuscripts were first cited.

His writings do not refer to a possible extinction of the planet, although it is clear that he believed the world would be affected by terrible events that would severely transform the humankind. Since he was dedicated to study the Bible, he knew that the prophecies revealed many catastrophes for the Lord's Day and he expected this event to happen around the year 2060, based on his belief that he could decipher the prophecies using mathematical calculations. Newton believed that the last great empire to be established in the world before the appearance of the Antichrist would be the Holy Roman-Germanic Empire, the first Emperor of which was Carlos Magno, who was crowned on December 25th, 800. Newton imagined that the Antichrist would appear 1,260 years after the creation of this empire ($800 + 1260 = 2060$), triggering the final events predicted in the apocalypse.⁸

An astronomical coincidence must have reinforced the idea that the year 2060 would be a special one for mankind. In 1696, Newton attended one of the passages of the comet that bears the name of the discoverer and his friend, Edmond Halley. From ancient times, comets had always been associated with catastrophic prophecies and Newton linked a future return of Halley's Comet to his prophetic calculations. The next perihelion of Halley's Comet would be on July 28th, 2061 and would be visible all over the world. It is almost certain that this explains why Newton wrote the following: "It could happen later, but I don't see any reason why it could happen earlier".

In a paper containing notes about the Apocalypse, the famous British scientist considered four significant dates as the starting point of his calculations: 609; 774; 788 and 841 A.D. Among these years, he was most interested in the year 609, although nobody knows for sure why he chose this number, a year which contained no special events. This date intrigued researchers since it has no expressive significance and it is not clear why it was included in the calculations. Some say this year was chosen because it was the year that Pope Boniface IV converted the Pantheon of Agrippa, a pagan temple, into a church dedicated to the Virgin Mary, saving the building from destruction by fanatical Christians. This explanation is not very convincing and has no relevance whatsoever to the matter at hand.

Newton's manuscripts are drafts that where he exposes several possible calculations related to future events. On one of these pages, he suggested that the pinnacle of the reign of the Antichrist would be in the year 1290 (Daniel 12:11) after the year 609. The year 1899 ($609 + 1290$) was close to the time of the formation of the Zionist movement: in 1896 Theodor Herzl released the book The Jewish State and in 1897 Zionism was officially founded. According to researchers who reviewed the documents, the creation of the state of Israel (1948) would have been predicted by Newton, who got to a date close to the actual year in question: $609 + 1335$ (Daniel 12:12) = 1944.

If there is no convincing historical fact that explains the selection of the year 609 in his equations, we may suppose that this number was probably revealed to him. Considering that Newton was a member of the Ancient and Mystical Order Rosae Crucis, it is possible that he obtained some secret information within the esoteric order. However, Newton was so obsessed in deciphering biblical prophecies that we may suspect another possibility. Perhaps he had dreamed of the number 609 or some “voice from beyond”, a spiritual inspiration, had revealed this number to him. Without understanding the reason why he used this year, he trusted in the mystical revelation and tried it, unaware of its importance in the equations that would determine the events predicted in the Apocalypse.

15

THE WRATH OF GOD IN 2017 – REVEALING WHAT ISAAC NEWTON FAILED TO DISCOVER

At the end of chapter 12 in the book of Daniel, there is a prediction related to the end of days. An angel makes the prophetic revelation, saying: “From the time that the regular sacrifice is abolished and the abomination of desolation is set up, there will be 1,290 days. Blessed is the one who waits for and reaches the end of the 1,335 days” (Daniel 12:11-12). Biblical commentators are divided in their interpretation of this significant prophecy by Daniel. Some believe it was the abomination committed by the Seleucid King Antiochus Epiphanes, when he withdrew the sacrifices made by the Levitical priests in the temple of Jerusalem to sacrifice a pig on the altar in honor of Zeus. Others think it was the destruction of the temple of Jerusalem in the year 70 AD. There are some who believe that it will happen in the future, when the Antichrist desecrates the future temple of Jerusalem, which remains to be built.

This prophecy of Daniel in relation to the end of days is incorrectly interpreted due to people misunderstanding the text. Two errors exist which cause an incorrect decryption of the prophecy. The first is to consider the abomination of desolation as an event subsequent to the regular sacrifice that is taken away. These two events did not occur at the same time, but are in fact different and separated by a period of time. The suppression of the regular sacrifice occurred first and was followed by the abomination of desolation being set up. According to the details revealed by the angel, there is a period of time between these events: 1,290 days and 1,335 days.

The prophecy refers to a regular sacrifice which is taken away. Biblical commentators tend to understand this as the practice of sacrificing animals inside of the temple of Jerusalem, which was suspended by order of the attacker king Antiochus Epiphanes, or when the temple was destroyed by the Romans in the year 70 AD. However, we can formulate a hypothesis that even today no one noticed. The time, or the year of the daily sacrifice was suspended in 609 BC, when the Jews lost the Battle of Megiddo.

The divine protection that the Jews received during the animal holocausts was taken away in the same year that they lost the battle with the Egyptians. It was so, because even if the priests continued with the sacrifices in the temple, this did not prevent the failure of Josiah's army or Nebuchadnezzar from conquering, sacking and destroying Jerusalem and the temple. Sometime later, although the priests continued to perform ritualistic sacrifices on the sacred altar, the Romans killed hordes of people, destroying the city and temple in the year 70 AD, and providing the coup de grace in the year 135 AD. Why did this happen? In spite of the priests performing the holocausts to Yahweh in the temple of Jerusalem, these sacrifices were no longer reaching the Lord because the connection between the ritual and the Lord's protection had been interrupted in the year 609 AD.

Prophets had already alerted the people that the ritualistic sacrifices they were making in the temple held no meaning and were not reaching the Lord, as can be seen in the following passages. "When you spread out your hands in prayer, I hide my eyes from you, even when you offer many prayers, I am not listening. Your hands are full of blood.” (Isaiah 1:15). Amos stated, “I hate, I despise your religious festivals. Your assemblies are a stench to me. Even though you bring me burnt offerings and grain offerings, I will not accept them, nor will I regard your fattened peace offerings.” (Amos 5:21-22). According to the prophet Hosea, Yahweh stated that the sacrifices had no more value and that He only wanted compassion and knowledge of real truths: “For I desire mercy and not sacrifice, and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings.” (Hosea 6:6). Even during captivity in Babylon, the Lord showed the priest and prophet Ezekiel, who was exiled in Babylon, the abominations committed by priests and elders (Ezekiel, chapter 8). The same prophet, during a spiritual revelation, watched the Lord leave the sanctuary of the temple in face of the iniquities and abominations that were being practiced there (Ezekiel 11:22-25). Holocausts were still being performed up to the year 70 AD, but, from a spiritual point of view, they no longer had any value because the connection with Yahweh had been interrupted. Meanwhile the useless religious ceremonies continued.

Sacrifices of animals directed only to Yahweh were called holocausts. Nobody ate the meat, which was completely burnt in the sacred altar. This practice was started by Moses, as we can see in Leviticus: “Moses said to Aaron: Draw near to the altar and offer your sin and your burnt offering and make atonement for yourself and for the people. Then bring the offering of the people and make atonement for them, as the Lord has commanded.” (Leviticus 9:7). Jeremiah lived during the reign of Josiah and received the Word of the Lord that sacrifices were unnecessary. The Lord commands that sacrifice for Him only could be consumed by the people, making it clear that the holocaust had no more spiritual significance. “Thus says the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel: Add your burnt offerings to your sacrifices, and eat the flesh. For in the day that I brought them out of the land of Egypt, I did not speak to your fathers or command concerning burnt offerings and sacrifices. But this command I gave them: 'Obey my voice, and I will be your God and you shall be my people. And walk in all the way that I command you, that it may be well with you.'” (Jeremiah 7:21-23). The indignation was so great that the Lord annulled what He Himself had said at the time of Moses.

One of the reasons for the pact between God and Moses was to free the Hebrews from slavery in Egypt and to give them an independent nation. However, this pact was broken and invalidated, as explained in Jeremiah: “Not like the covenant that I made with their fathers on the day when I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt, my covenant that they broke, though I was their husband, declares the LORD.” (Jeremiah 31:32). Therefore, the sacrifices that were continually offered to Yahweh on the sacred altar lost their meaning and no longer had any value. If the pact made with the people, through Moses, allowed the formation of an independent Israeli nation, the invalidation of this pact allowed foreign nations to dominate the people of Yahweh, stealing their independence.

Thus, the regular sacrifice, referred to by Daniel’s prophecy was withdrawn in 609 BC when King Josiah lost his kingdom to the Egyptians. The same prophet, upon predicting the destruction of the temple of Jerusalem, associated an army (of the Egyptian pharaoh Necho II) with the ritualistic sacrifices that lost their spiritual function of protecting the people: “And a host will be given over to it together with the regular burnt offering because of transgression, and it will throw truth to the ground, and it will act and prosper.” (Daniel 8:12). From that year forth, although sacrifices were still conducted at the temple, they had no value for Yahweh. The Lord interrupted the connection with the people through the holocaust of animals, which guaranteed the maintenance of an independent Jewish state. The divine pardon that the people had been receiving through the holocausts no longer existed, as can be seen in the following passage: “[...] surely, because you have defiled my sanctuary with all your detestable things and with all your abominations, therefore I will withdraw. My eye will not spare, and I will have no pity.” (Ezekiel 5:11).

When the protective connection of the regular sacrifices in the temple was withdrawn, foreign people began to dominate the Jews, starting the punishment predicted in Leviticus 26:18. The external domination of the people of Israel began with the defeat of Josiah, when the Kingdom of Judah lost its independence, and remained under the control of foreign nations from that moment on. After the defeat in Megiddo, the Egyptians dominated the Jews, followed by Babylonian, Persian, Greek and Roman control. With the latest diaspora, the Jewish people spread around the world and continued to be subordinate to many nations until the end of their punishment in 1948, with the creation of the state of Israel.

Therefore, knowing when the regular sacrifice was interrupted, we can determine the interval between this event and the last, which will be the abomination of desolation. The prophecy says that when regular sacrifice was withdrawn, the abomination of desolation was set in place and would take 1,290 days. The one who survived 1,335 days would be fortunate. The second mistake that all scholars in biblical prophecies make is to think that the total prophetic period is 1,335 days. They think that the meaning of the text is 1,290 days, and lucky is the one who survives another 45 days, to complete 1,335 days ($1,290 + 45 = 1,335$). This is not a correct interpretation of the prophecy. The secret to discovering the end of days is to sum the two periods. Thus, we can decode the text as follows: from the time that regular sacrifice was withdrawn until the time the abomination of desolation will be in place, there will be 1,290 days. The one who lives another 1,335 days will be fortunate. The promise of happiness is in the fact that, after this long period, the messianic Kingdom or the Kingdom of God as promised by Jesus, which the Jews were waiting for, would finally arrive.

Remembering that, in prophecies, one day is equal to one year, the prophetic interval therefore corresponds to 1,290 years + 1,335 years = 2,625 years. Thus, we can calculate when the prophecy of Daniel will come true, in relation to the abomination of desolation as follows: 609 BC - 2,625 years = 2,016 + 1 = 2017.⁹ Therefore, the key year that Isaac Newton should have used in his prophetic equations was 609 BC and not 609 AD. The year that the eminent scientist sought to discover throughout his entire life was 2017, and not 2060. Only now, with barely a few years left until the last day and the fulfillment of the biblical prophecy, God allows the truth to be revealed. Newton, as a scientist, understood the prophecies literally. For this reason, he could not decipher the significance of the year 609 when it was possibly revealed to him in a dream or by spiritual inspiration. Even without understanding, he used the number in his equations, but in the wrong period.

We already know that the regular sacrifice was withdrawn in 609 BC, the interval of time that the prophecy refers to is 2,625 years and the fulfillment of the prophecy will be in 2017. Therefore, it only remains to know what the abomination of desolation actually means. According to a number of studies, this future event could involve the Antichrist, who will enter the temple of Jerusalem, sit on the sacred altar and desecrate the name of God. However, the temple of Jerusalem no longer exists and will first need to be rebuilt where today there are two holy Islamic sanctuaries: the Dome of the Rock and the Al-Aqsa Mosque. With such a short time to go until the fulfillment of the prophecy (2017), it is impossible for everything to happen, because the Antichrist who was to come had already done so, and his name was Adolf Hitler.¹⁰

Therefore, the abomination that will cause great desolation on our planet is the dwarf star companion of the Sun. Daniel asked the celestial being when the end would come and enigmatically, the angel replied that it would be when the agent that would cause great desolation on our planet was in place. Today, we understand that the angel was referring to a star that will surprise the whole world.

16

THE BEGINNING OF THE MESSIANIC ERA IN 2018

All religions and ancient cultures have prophesized an apocalyptic day when the order of the world would be shaken and all renovated. The planetary collapse predicted to happen on the day of the Wrath of God is known in Judaism as the Acharit Hayamim, when the world should be wracked by calamitous events. Everything will be razed to the ground so that the world can be rebuilt in a new era of peace and plenty. The Talmud teaches that, when the world is six thousand years old, the Acharit Hayamim will happen. It will be followed by eternal happiness on Earth, known as the Messianic Era, which in Christianity is known as the Kingdom of God. Irenaeus, one of the fathers of the church, believed that Christ would come again 600 years after Adam's creation to rule the world for a thousand years. Rabbis of the past taught that human history can be understood as a seven millennium week, comprising 6,000 years of human labor to build the world of God, and the seventh millennium would be dedicated to mankind to rest, not just for a thousand years, but for all eternity. For this reason, the seventh millennium is also known as the Sabbath millennium in reference to the 7th day of rest in the Jewish faith (Shabbat). Therefore, the Messianic era will begin soon after six thousand years of labor have been completed, in the era of Olam Haze (the world in which we currently live).

The seventh millennium (Olam Haba - the world to come) will be an era of holiness, tranquility, spiritual life and world peace. The book Midrash Rabbah, which is part of the oral tradition of the Jewish people in the 1st century AD, confirms this: “Six eras of coming and going, six years of war and peace. The seventh era is entirely Shabbat and shall represent rest for eternal life.” A number of patriarchs of the early Christian church, such as Irenaeus, Justin, Origen, Clement of Alexandria, Hilary, Lactantius, Jerome and St. Augustine, argued that the world would last six thousand years, divided into three periods of two thousand years each. The 1st period of two thousand years corresponds to the era from Adam until Abraham, the 2nd from Abraham until Jesus, and the 3rd from Jesus until the Messianic Era, the Kingdom of God. In the letter of Barnabas, considered an apocryphal text, we find in Chapter 15 the idea that the sabbatical millennium is being preached among the early Christians: “For six days God worked with His hands, and on the seventh day He rested, making such a day holy. Pay attention, children, about what it means to end on the seventh day. This means that the Lord will consume the universe in six thousand years, as one day means a thousand years. He Himself testifies to this saying, Behold, one day of the Lord is as if a thousand years. Therefore, children, in six days, which are six thousand years, the universe will be consumed”.¹¹

From the chronology of the Jewish calendar, the year 6000 will begin on September 30th, 2239 in the Gregorian calendar. This means that the world must live through another 200 years of violence, war, poverty, erosion of individual freedoms, religious and racial intolerance and the destruction of the planet, until the Messianic Era. Mankind will not bear so much of trouble and completely destroy itself long before this period. The time for a change is now and everything suggests that we are very close to complete this six thousand year period. As such, we can perhaps suspect that the Jewish calendar must be late in contrast to the real divine calendar, and the Sabbath millennium will begin soon.

The Bible holds the key to discovering when the seventh millennium will begin. Counting from Adam's creation to the birth of Jesus, it is possible to discover just how much time remains until the year 6000 in our Gregorian calendar. The table below shows the time from Adam's creation until the birth of Jesus with their respective biblical references.

Biblical reference	Biblical Character	Time
Genesis 5:1-2	God created Adam.	0
Genesis 5:3	Adam was 130 years old when Seth was born.	130 years
Genesis 5:6	Seth was 105 years old when Enos was born.	+ 105 years
Genesis 5:9	Enos was 90 years old when Cainan was born.	+ 90 years
Genesis 5:12	Cainan was 70 years old when Maalaleel was born.	+ 70 years
Genesis 5:15	Maalaleel was 65 years old when Jarend was born.	+ 65 years
Genesis 5:18	Jared was 162 years old when Enoch was born.	+ 162 years
Genesis 5:21	Enoch was 65 years old when Methuselah was born.	+ 65 years
Genesis 5:25	Methuselah was 187 years old when Lamech was born.	+ 187 years
Genesis 5:28	Lamech was 182 years old when Noah was born.	+ 182 years
Genesis 7:6	Noah was 600 years old when the flood came.	+ 600 years
Conclusion	1,656 years passed from the creation of Adam until the biblical flood.	Total: 1656 years
Genesis 11:10	Arphaxad, son of Shem and grandson of Noah, was born 2 years after the flood.	2 years
Genesis 11:12	Arphaxad was 35 years old when Shelah was born.	+ 35 years
Genesis 11:14	Shelah was 30 years old when Eber was born.	+ 30 years

Biblical reference	Biblical Character	Time
Genesis 11:16	Eber was 34 years old when Peleg was born.	+ 34 years
Genesis 11:18	Peleg was 30 years old when Reu was born.	+ 30 years
Genesis 11:20	Reu was 32 years old when Serug was born.	+ 32 years
Genesis 11:22	Serug was 30 years old when Nahor was born.	+ 30 years
Genesis 11:24	Nahor was 29 years old when Terah was born.	+ 29 years
Genesis 11:32	Terah, father of Abraham, lived for 205 years.	+ 205 years
Conclusion	A total of 427 years passed from the end of the flood until the death of the father of Abraham.	Total: 427 years
Atos 7:4	Following the death of Terah, Abraham left the land of Haran.
Genesis 12:4	Abraham was 75 years old when he left Haran.
Genesis 17:1	Abraham was 99 years old when the Lord appeared to him.
Conclusion	A total of 24 years passed between the death of Terah and the circumcision covenant of Abraham with the LORD (75 - 99)	Total: 24 years
Galatians 3:16-17	In these verses, Paul reveals that 430 years passed between the covenant with Abraham and the covenant with Moses, which was soon after the people left Egypt. Easter began on the same night as the flight from Egypt (Exodus 12:40-51).	Total: 430 years
1 Kings 6:1	480 years after the Jewish people left Egypt and in the fourth year of the reign of Solomon, the Temple of Jerusalem began to be built.	Total: 480 years
	According to the most reliable historic and archeological records and the chronology of Professor Gershon Galil from the University of Haifa, the reign of Solomon was between 970 and 931 AD. Therefore, the construction of the First Temple of Jerusalem was in the year 966 BC.	Total: 966 years
	If we add the periods together, we can determine that the biblical period from the creation of man, according to the birth of Christ, is as follows: 1656 + 427 + 24 + 430 + 480 + 966.	Total: 3983 years
3983 years BC + 2,018 years (- 1 year) = 6000 years or 6000 - 3,983 = 2017 + 1 = 2018

If the periods are added together, 3,983 years passed from Adam until the birth of Jesus Christ. With this knowledge, it is possible to calculate when the seventh millennium really began: $6,000 - 3,983 = 2017 + 1 = 2018$. Remember that the Gregorian calendar began at year one and not year zero, it is necessary to add one more year to the difference. Therefore, according to these calculations, based on the Bible, on September 10th, 2018 (Rosh Hashanah, the Jewish New Year) the seventh millennium will begin, surprising many Jews, who are expecting the Messianic Era to begin in 2239. It is natural to believe that the cataclysmic destruction predicted to happen on the Day of the Lord will take place during the old millennium, and that the new millennium will begin amidst a mood of unity and fraternity among all nations. Therefore, at such time all the prophecies relating to the end of the world will be concluded or it will be in their final phase.

We can find an identical result if we count the days based on astronomy. As we do not know in which month of 3983 BC Adam was born, we can start with January 1st:

Gregorian Calendar	Julian Day
January 1st, 3983 BC	266,632.5
November 2nd, 2017	2,458,085.5
Difference	2,191,453 days
$2,191,453 \div 365.2422 = 6,000$ years

In this way, the six thousand years will be completed on November 28th, 2017. However, if we consider the beginning of the Biblical calendar on October 14th, 3983 BC, the seventh millennium will begin on September 10th, 2018, precisely the date of New Year in the Hebrew calendar.

Gregorian Calendar	Julian Day
October 14th, 3983 BC	266,918.5
September 10th, 2018	2,458,371.5
Interval	2,191,453 days
$2,191,453 \div 365,2422 = 6,000$ years

“He told them this parable: “Look at the fig tree and all the trees. When they sprout leaves, you can see for yourselves and know that summer is near. Even so, when you see these things happening, you know that the kingdom of God is near. Truly I tell you, this generation will certainly not pass away until all these things have happened.” (Luke 21:29-32). Many Bible scholars, associating Israel to a fig tree, interpret these verses as a prophetic parable. Jesus, after describing the catastrophic scenario happening in the world (this will be discussed in Chapter 20), states that the generation that watch the renewal of the State of Israel (the fig tree that sprouts leaves) also will witness the cataclysms and the arrival of the Kingdom of God. If we add 70 years, which is the generation time according to the Bible, to 1948 which is the year of the founding of the modern State of Israel, we get to the deadline for the beginning of the Kingdom of God and the so long awaited return of Jesus: 2018.

17

THE END OF THE PAPACY IN THE CATHOLIC CHURCH IN 2019

The seer Nostradamus predicted that in two centuries the head office of the Catholic Church would leave the Vatican. This will happen in Francis's papacy. Europe will suffer from many earthquakes when Nemesis gets closer to Earth and exerting its greatest influence. Many ancient buildings will be destroyed by earthquakes. During these days, The Vatican will be really affected, pushing Francis to leave Rome and settle on the American continent. Given that the United States is predominantly Protestant, it is highly likely that the Catholic Church's head office should be moved to Argentina, the Pope's homeland, or to Brazil, since the population is predominantly Catholic and the country has the largest number of Catholics in the world, about 145 million of believers.

Nostradamus

Century 2, Quatrain 41

The great star will burn for seven days.

The cloud will cause two suns to appear.

The big mastiff will howl through the night.

When the great pontiff changes residence.

Through his prophetic clairvoyance, Michel de Nostradamus sees the star Nemesis shining in the sky for a week. Will be the most terrible days that mankind will know and will be recorded in history as the day that transformed human civilization. For seven days, according to Nostradamus, the great star, Nemesis, will be at the peak of its magnetic interference on our planet. On the days that is closest, it will be seen the size of the bright full moon, like a “Second Sun” (like a double). The seer calls the immense celestial body “big mastiff”, which will howl in the form of thunder and a shower of meteors tearing up the sky, resembling a dog that howls constantly. It is interesting to observe the comparison the seer makes with a dog whose breed has a wrinkled face and an aggressive appearance. The Neapolitan mastiff is an ancient breed, and great writers of the Roman Empire referred to this kind of dog as the “good watchdog”. The mastiff is a watchdog of huge size and imposing appearance. It looks robust and its head is covered in impressive folds and wrinkles. Nemesis is the watchdog from space that God will send to Earth to protect the portion of mankind that is good and obedient to His Laws and will expel thieves, criminals, the wicked, the perverse and those that harm others. The last verse reveals that the Roman pontiff will be obliged to change his residence in these days of great distress.

These warnings from Nostradamus remind us of St. Malachy’s prophecy about the last pope: “In the final persecution of the Holy Roman Church, Peter the Roman will reign and will shepherd his flock amid many tribulations. Thereafter, the city of seven hills (Rome) will be destroyed and the dreadful Judge will judge His people.” This pope is Francis, who will have the difficult task of keeping the church together in these stormy days.

St. Malachy's list of popes is wrongly interpreted as a prophecy that foretells the end of the Catholic Church or the end of the world. Nothing like that will happen, since the end of the pontifical list represents the end of the hierarchical system in charge of the Church, giving way to a more democratic system where future leaders will not have a lifetime mandate. The Catholic Church will not disappear, but will undergo a radical renewal never before seen. The church will return to the simplicity of the early years of Christianity.

Pope Francis in a few months in the chair of St. Peter gave several examples of simplicity and humility that make him a man committed to his pastoral mission. Concerned with the poor and excluded, Francis will be the last pope in two thousand years of the papacy and the first in a new period of Catholicism. Only a great and unique event will be capable of producing such a profound transformation in the Catholic Church.

Analyzing St. Malachy's list of popes, we can determine the year when the papacy will end and a New Catholic Church will begin. There are mottos that make reference to a condition of medium or half of something. Mottos 72 and 73 indicate half of the relationship, because the idea of half or the middle is explained. Symbol 72 is for the Pope Gregory XIII (1572-1585): Medium Pilarus Corpus (Body in the Middle of the Spheres), and the motto 73 is for Pope Sixtus V (1585-1590): Meditate in Signi Axis (Axis in the Middle of the Emblem).

The prophecy hides in these two mottos the information that the two popes to which they refer are halfway through St. Malachy's list. It is interesting to note that half of the list is actually motto 56 ($112 \div 2$), however, this is not half of the papacy period, starting with Celestine II, a situation that might be expected if the prophecy was a fraud. Thus, we can predict when the end of the current structure upon which the Catholic Church is founded will happen and the beginning of a new era for Catholicism. Mottos 72 and 73 represent the middle of St. Malachy’s list and run from the beginning of the pontificate of Gregory XII (1572) until the end of the pontificate of Pope Sixtus (1590). Knowing this, we can determine the exact year that is the middle of the prophecy:

$$1590 - 1572 = 18 \text{ years}$$

$$18 \div 2 = 9 \text{ years}$$

$$1572 + 9 = 1581$$

Therefore, the year 1581 is exactly half of the prophetic period beginning with Pope Celestine II and ending with Pope Francis. If the first half represents 438 years between 1143 and 1581, then the second half must include the same gap of 438 years from 1581. Therefore, the year that will mark the end of the papacy in the Catholic Church will be 2019.¹²

18

THE RETURN OF SEDNA

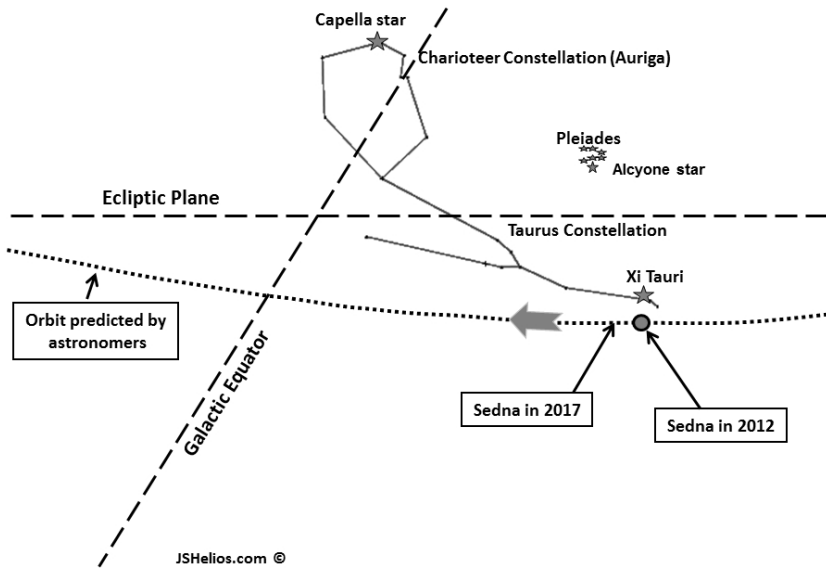

According to an esoteric saying, “when the student is ready the teacher appears”. The considerations of this and the next chapters were developed after the publication of the first edition of this book. Perhaps a maturing of the whole study of prophecies was required for the final revelation to become clear.

Thus, assuming that the Day of the Lord, the Wrath of God, is almost upon us, why has the Sun’s companion star, that will define the eschatological climax predicted in the prophecies, has not been discovered? So far, our explanation has been based on the fact that the sky in the Southern Hemisphere has been underexplored in relation to the north, but there may be another explanation. Nemesis may have already been found, and it is called Sedna! A number of coincidences support this hypothesis. The orbital period of the planetoid Sedna coincides with the end of the last ice age, a time when many species of large mammals became extinct. Mystics believe Nibiru or Planet X, to be red and to have a very long orbit, just as Sedna is. Another clue is the prophetic discourse of Jesus when He prophesied that a great worldwide destruction would be caused by something from space that would not be in its rightful place. When astronomers discovered Sedna, the position of the planetoid surprised them, because it should not have been where it was.

The planetoid 90377 Sedna is the farthest body orbiting the Sun. It was discovered in 2003 and named in honor of a mythological goddess of the Eskimo people, who reigns at the bottom of the Arctic Ocean. The astronomer Mike Brown, one of the discoverers of the planetoid, admitted at the time that Sedna was a very odd body. It should not be where it is, because there is no logical explanation for its orbit. It is not close enough to be affected by the sun and is too distant to be influenced by the nearest star. Sedna is a puzzle, because astronomers do not know what holds it to the Solar System.

The origin of Sedna is uncertain. It is believed to have been put in the orbit where it lies by a star that came from the same stellar nursery in which the Sun was born, or was captured from another planetary system by the Sun itself. Another explanation suggests that it was a wandering planet in the past, and was captured by the Sun's gravity million years ago. The planetoid behaves like a long-period comet, ie, its orbit is quite eccentric elliptical (elongated) where at perihelion is 76 AU from the Sun and at aphelion is 937 AU away. The orbital period is one of the longest in our system and has been estimated at between 10,500 and 12,690 years.

The orbit calculated for Sedna shows that the star is approaching perihelion (point of closest orbit around the Sun), which should arrive in 2076. Nowadays, the planetoid can be observed by powerful instruments if pointed towards the constellation of Taurus, or more precisely next to the star Xi Tauri and 12° below the ecliptic. Astrophysicists, who believe in the existence of a dwarf companion star to the Sun, suspect that it must be found near the galactic plane. Interestingly Sedna is also close to the galactic plane, which make us believe this to be the hidden star that astronomers look for and which disturbs the orbits of asteroids beyond Pluto.

With this information, if indeed there is not a hidden brown dwarf star close to the Solar System, we can assume Sedna is the attacker star every 12,000 years or so, causes mass extinction on Earth. Sedna may surprise both for its size, it should be as small as you think, as the orbit, which could be quite different from that calculated. In fact, the calculations made by the Brazilian astronomer Rodney Gomes of the National Observatory show that Sedna and six other asteroids in the Kuiper Belt, are in strange orbits relative to the position where they should be. Due to this finding, it is assumed that these bodies are gravitationally influenced by another much larger body, when the reality may be quite different. The observed anomalous orbits must be real and may indicate that these bodies have a trajectory unimagined. If this hypothesis is confirmed, scientists will be astonished when they find out that Sedna is coming our way!

Sedna should already be closer to us than the astronomers think. The planetoid will come below the ecliptic plane and will return to the periphery of the Solar System when it is between the orbits of Earth and Venus. This trajectory would explain the influence Sedna would have on Venus, which over millions of years has approached below the orbital plane and returned above it, shifting the axis of rotation and slowing down the speed of rotation of the planet.

Until there is absolute certainty, no hypothesis can be ruled out, since unusual situations are often found in the universe. An example of a extravagant system is the star 16 Cygni B, located in the constellation Cygnus (Swan) 70 light-years from Earth. It surrounds a planet with a very eccentric and unusual orbit. Transposing this planet to our Solar System, it would be at perihelion closer to the Sun than Mercury, and when it is farther away, would pass near Jupiter, completely diverging from the other planets that naturally have nearly circular orbits.

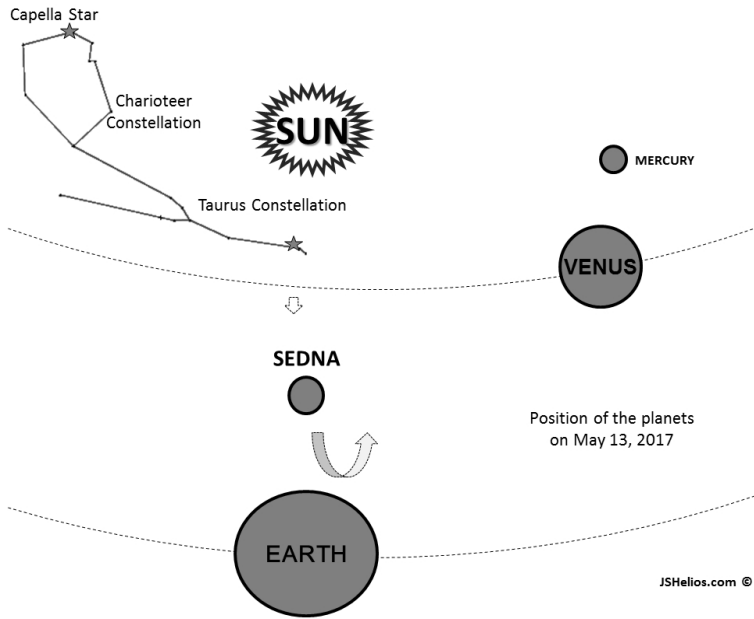

The physical composition of Sedna is another mystery. All that is known about it is that it is very red and there is no evidence of methane ice or water on its surface. Observations made by SMARTS telescope in Chile revealed that it is one of the reddest objects in the Solar System, as red as Mars. A team of astronomers who researched the planetoid suggest that its dark red color is caused by a hydrocarbon sludge covering the entire surface. Called tolina, this sludge is found in abundance on Titan, Saturn's moon.

The reddish color of Sedna recalls Hercolubus the red planet predicted by the Gnostic teachers Samael Aun Weor and V. M. Rabolu. In 1998, Rabolu wrote the book Hercolubus or Red Planet, which states that a planet would dangerously approach Earth, as had happened in the past, and destroyed Atlantis, when Noah was one of the survivors. The curious similarity in color between the two stars indicates that Sedna must be largely responsible for the cataclysmic changes that the Earth periodically suffers.

Assuming that Sedna is the destroyer star which was the central focus of this book, under the name of Nemesis, we can consider that its passage between the orbits of Earth and Venus will have the same effect foreseen for Nemesis in Chapters 7, 8 and 9. Sedna will bring thousands of smaller bodies, which will rain down as a meteor shower. Part of these bodies shall be from the Kuiper Belt and the other part are coming asteroids from the Asteroid Belt between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter. Although astronomers have not yet identified the planetoid, certainly has a powerful magnetic field to induce the reversal of magnetic poles of the Earth and the displacement of the geographic poles.

Sedna will be dangerously close to Earth when the Sun is in Taurus (April 21st to May 20th) or in the following months, depending on the trajectory of the body. With this astronomical arrangement, Sedna will be visible during the day close to the Sun, appearing to be a 'Second Sun', as already predicted by some esoteric.

Another curious fact that catches the eye is that the orbital period of Sedna exactly corresponds to an impact event occurred about 12,000 years ago. The Clovis comet hypothesis is a theory that suggests the impact of a large comet or asteroid on the North American continent, scrapping the atmosphere in a blast with thousands of fragments against the ground. This event was followed by many fires that caused mass extinctions of some species of large animals and the sudden disappearance of a prehistoric human population of Americans from the Early Stone Age known as the Clovis people. Among the extinct species in that occasion, we highlight the woolly mammoth, the saber-toothed tiger, the giant elk and the woolly rhinoceros. It is important to emphasize that about 12,000 years ago something happened on the planet, ending the Ice Age, the last glacial period and beginning the Holocene Era in which we live in and has allowed the expansion of human civilization.

Several scientific expeditions in the Black Sea have found that in the past there was a lake of fresh water, but in 8000 BC, a great flood coming from the Mediterranean Sea invaded the whole place, giving rise to what is now the Black Sea. The researchers believe that the freshwater lake was separated from the Mediterranean by a narrow isthmus at the Bosphorus level. Evidence for such an occurrence are pockets of freshwater found two meters beneath the sea, traces of freshwater snails shells, ravines of underground river, carved wood and man-made structures to 100 feet deep off the coast of Anatolia, Turkey.

The flood myth exists in all ancient cultures and Sedna must be responsible for it. Another intriguing case is Yonaguni. The Japanese island, located 125 km off the coast of Taiwan became world famous in 1987 when the diving instructor Kihachiro Arataki accidentally discovered the ruins of stone buildings at the sea floor revealing the existence of an ancient civilization in that location. The ruins, which seem to be aimed for religious ceremonies, could only have been built there before the end of the last Ice Age, when the sea level was lower.

Doggerland is the name given by archaeologists to a missing plain in the south of North Sea that connected the island of Great Britain to the European continent at the time of the last Ice Age. In 2012, researchers at the University of St. Andrews found signs of civilization submerged in Scotland's sea. It is believed that the region was home to a large concentration of humans, perhaps the largest in Europe at the time.

It is possible to believe that sophisticated civilizations existed in various parts of the world in the Ice Age, similar to the civilizations of Mesopotamia and Ancient Egypt. With the occurrence of a global catastrophe, they all were extinct and the signs of their existence disappeared completely. The few remaining traces of that distant past are the ruins of Yonaguni, Doggerland, the Bimini Road in the Bahamas, the Sphinx of Giza, the pyramids in China and Bosnia, the monument of Stonehenge, the legendary sunken island of Atlantis, among others. The human race entered a process of immense cultural and civilizational regression, forcing the few who escaped the destruction and floods to seek refuge in caves. This makes us believe that some records of rock art and artifacts of polished stone, dating from the Neolithic period, were produced by those survivors who rebuilt civilization some millennia later.

The most compelling archaeological evidence that there were civilizations long before the first known civilization is the archaeological site of Göbekli Tepe. On top of a hill 15 km from Urfa, southeastern Turkey, four circular megalithic buildings of 30 meters in diameter, and sixteen others needed to be excavated were discovered. The researchers believe that the site must be 12,000 years old and coincides with the orbital period of Sedna. We can assume that the buildings and the population there were destroyed by the disasters that swept the planet during the last passage of Sedna, and long after, the megalithic complex was covered with stones by a people that discovered the abandoned site.

Nostradamus

Century 4, Quatrain 28

When Venus is shrouded by the Sun.

Under the splendor a form is hidden.

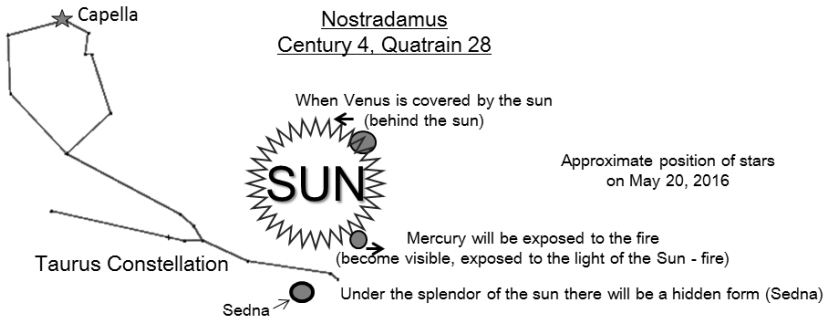

Mercury will be revealed by the fire.

Through warlike noise it will be insulted.

The verse “When Venus is shrouded by the Sun” expresses the astronomical condition in which Venus is in a superior conjunction, ie , behind the Sun. This will happen exactly on June 6th, 2016. The verse “Under the splendor, a form is hidden” reveals that beneath the splendor of the Sun (Celestial South), a body is hidden (Sedna). Starting on May 20th, 2016, Venus will be covered up by the Sun, as the glare of the star king will not allow Venus to be seen.

In Roman mythology, Mercury was in charge of taking messages from Jupiter and wore a hat and sandals with wings, being the god of transportation and communication and protector of travelers and merchants. In this quatrain of Nostradamus, Mercury is not the planet, but Sedna, the space traveler which will come from afar. Therefore, between May and June 2016, it will be possible for scientists to discover, in shock, that Sedna is approaching the Sun and moving in our direction.

The last verse mentions “warlike noise”, probably a reference to World War III. The image that Nostradamus seems to want to convey is that the star, which in the past has always caused mass destruction on Earth, when coming back this time, will find man destroying himself through a nuclear war. This will be an insult to Sedna, which always had the function of inflicting pain and destruction on our planet. ¹³

Through warlike noise (Nuclear War)
(Sedna) will be insulted

JSHelios.com ©

19

SECRETS IN ORION

The region of the sky where we assume Sedna should arise, the destroyer star that from time to time visits the Solar System, is quite special because it is home to the most important and significant stars of antiquity to the modern spiritualist movements. This region is also mentioned in the Bible. The book of Job (9:9, 38:31) and Amos (5:8) cite the Pleiades and the constellation of Orion.

In 1848, the main founder of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, the prophetess Ellen G. White had a vision of heaven “opening up” exactly in the constellation of Orion. In the book Early Writings, she wrote: “December 16th, 1848, the Lord gave me a view of the shaking of the powers of Heaven. [...] The powers of Heaven shall be shaken with the voice of God. Then the sun, moon and stars will be moved into place. [...] Dark, heavy clouds came up and clashed against each other. The atmosphere parted and rolled back, then we could look through the open space in Orion, whence came the voice of God. The Holy City will come down through that open space. I saw that the powers of Earth are now being shaken and events occur in order. Wars and rumors of war, sword, famine and pestilence are first to shake the powers of Earth, and then the voice of God will shake the sun, moon, and stars, the Earth also. I saw that the shaking of the powers in Europe is not, as some teach, the shaking of the powers of Heaven, but the shaking of the angry nations.”

The glorious vision she experienced that year led Adventists to believe that Jesus will return to the world by a passage through Orion. However, Ellen White described the final events of the present humankind era. She saw cosmic upheavals in Heaven and on Earth, and war between nations, exactly as we anticipate in this book. Orion is prominent in this vision because it is from there that the Holy City, described in Revelation 21:2, will descend. This city is just an allegory for the new world and a new mankind that there will be formed after these disastrous events.

According to our forecast, in May 2017, Sedna will be among the constellation of Orion and Taurus, causing numerous disasters on Earth, as just as happened in its last visit. This will be the end of a world of evil, violence, wars, intolerance, pain and suffering, and the beginning of a new planet, a New Jerusalem of peace and solidarity. The vision of Ellen White expressed this moment in world history which is soon happen.

The constellation of Orion is the most easily recognizable of stars in the night sky and of great importance in the culture of ancient Egypt, personified as the god Osiris. It was there they believed the souls of the Pharaohs were brought to after death. This importance was immortalized on the Giza Plateau, on the outskirts of Cairo, where the three most important pyramids of Egypt were built. As the pyramids of Kings Cheops, Chephren and Menkaure are aligned with the three stars form Orion's Belt, which in Egyptian astronomy is the eye of Osiris, it makes us suppose that the wise Egyptians wanted to show the direction from which the cosmic beast that terrorizes humankind would arise. By constructing the three pyramids in alignment with Orion's belt, perhaps they had the veiled intention of indicating where the destroyer star would appear to a future generation that would witness the great apocalyptic chaos. The curious thing is that the Orion's mother was a mortal and his father Poseidon, god of the seas. This is reminiscent of the biblical flood that wiped out the civilizations of the past and is mythologized in various ancient cultures.

The figure below shows the constellations of Taurus and Orion in the Cairo sky on May 20th, 2017. Point A indicates the position when Sedna was discovered in 2003 by the astronomer Mike Brown. Point B indicates the position of the planetoid in 2017, considering the orbit calculated by astronomers. Point C is our indication of where Sedna will stun the world, by suddenly appearing in the sky. Note that above point C is the star Aldebaran, which in ancient Greece was known as "The Torch." Did the Greeks also have a slight recollection in that region of the sky of a very bright torch which appears every few millennia? An observation: astronomers who believe in the existence of Nemesis look for it near the galactic plane, which can be seen in the figure cutting the Auriga (Charioteer) constellation. This is evidence that Sedna could actually be the star Nemesis that several astronomers seek. Finally, the last curiosity is Orion's mace and shield pointing toward Sedna. Could this be a symbolic attempt, depicted by the ancient sages, to show a hunter intent on protecting mankind by destroying the terrible invading star?

Nostradamus

Century 1, Quatrain 46

Close to Auch, Lectoure and Mirande.

A great fire in the sky shall fall for three nights,
The cause will appear both stupefying and marvelous,
Shortly afterwards the Earth will shake.

In this quatrain, as explained in Chapter 6, Nostradamus seems to find in the sky the origin of the fire that will fall on Earth. He cites three French communes: Auch, Lectoure and Mirande. By looking at them on the map, it is possible to observe a curious coincidence. Mirande and Auch are aligned and Lectoure misaligned exactly in the same way as the three stars form Orion's belt, Alnitak, and Mintaka Alnilam, are arranged. It is likely that Nostradamus was referring to these stars and his intention was to alert us that the fire in the sky will come from this part of the celestial sphere, exactly where we foresee the rising of Sedna.

The French prophet declares that fire will fall for three nights. But how is this possible if Sedna is closest to Earth during the day? It is possible that the three nights Nostradamus refers to are three days of major disasters, the climax of the apocalyptic moment. There will be days of many storms and thus the sky will be covered by thick clouds. In these days Sedna will reach perihelion and make its way back to the vastness of space. Therefore, it is likely that at some point the star could eclipse the sun, turning day into night.

The Ten Plagues of Egypt recounted in the book of Exodus could be reminiscent of what happened in the world during the last visit of Sedna. Besides pests and diseases there was also a hail of fire (a meteor shower), and during the ninth plague there were three days of darkness "Moses stretched out his hand to the sky and there was a thick darkness in all the land of Egypt for three days" (Exodus 10:22). Figuratively speaking, we could also understand the three nights to be days of many afflictions, which, incidentally, were also prophesied by Jesus.

20

THE PROPHECY OF JESUS FOR A GLOBAL CATASTROPHE

The prophetic sermon of Jesus comprises two prophecies. The first is the destruction of Jerusalem and its temple, and the second is of a global catastrophe predicted to happen at the time the Christian church awaits the return of Jesus. The two prophecies are mixed in a prophetic discourse because the evangelists were unable to distinguish what was referring to one and to the other. However, analyzing the text, we find the words of concerning the global cataclysm He predicted. Everything begins with the rise of something terrible that will cause great desolation in the world. Jesus, in the Gospels of Mark and Matthew, uses the same name found in the book of the prophet Daniel: the abomination of desolation.

Mark 13:14	Matthew 24:15-16
When ye shall see the abomination which shall not be located where it stands, let the reader understand, then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains.	When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, let the reader understand, then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains.

The abomination of desolation was prophesized by Daniel in verses 09:27, 11:31 and 12:11. It is usually associated to the Syrian king Antiochus IV Epiphanes or to the general Titus Flavius who destroyed

Jerusalem in the year 70 AD, or to a future antichrist that many Bible commentators believe is coming. Of these three, only Titus Flavius is likely to represent the abomination that brought desolation to Jerusalem and to the Temple. However, just as Jesus prophesized the destruction of Jerusalem and a worldwide destruction, Daniel did too, and His prophecy is present globally in verses 12:11-12, which were studied in the chapter “The Wrath of God in 2017 - What Isaac Newton Failed to Discover”. This is because the final verses of the book of Daniel are clearly eschatological, that is to say, they are intended for the end of time, not for the days of Jesus. The abomination of desolation mentioned in verse 12:11, that Jesus recalls in His prophetic speech, is the destroyer star, Sedna, which will cause great destruction.

In the Gospel of Mark, Jesus confirmed the seriousness of the situation warning that the abomination will be where it ought not to. The text of Matthew is a little different, as he says that it will be in the “holy place”. This suggests Titus Flavius or a supposed antichrist of the future invading the altar of the Temple of Jerusalem. As explained elsewhere in this book, it is impossible to be the latter because, as for the Temple of Jerusalem be built, first the Dome of the Rock and the Al-Aqsa Mosque must be put down, not mentioning the time of construction of the temple, which would not be ready in the decade in question.

Therefore we can be sure that Jesus was not referring to the Roman legions when he talked about the “Abomination of Desolation.” As the Gospel of Mark is the source of the Gospel of Matthew, it is possible that the final writer of the book of Matthew has interpreted the text in his own way, giving another meaning to the words of Mark, who may have said: “shall not be located where it stands”. Some scholars believe that the text of Mark was written following the sacking of Jerusalem in the year 70 AD. It is possible that some copying mistakes may have happened among the various copies of the Gospel of Mathew, until reaching the oldest copies we have today with the tempered texts.

As such, the text of Mark is the most reliable information for an exact translation of how the prophesized destruction will take place. Jesus could not have been talking about the Temple of Jerusalem (the “holy place”) because if the Roman troops had arrived at the Temple, the destruction of Judea would already have been completed and there would have been no reason to urge those who were in Judea to flee to the mountains. Logically, Jesus was referring to was the destroyer star which would be in Heaven, where it should not be, ie, invading the Solar System and dangerously approaching our planet. This is the abomination with necessary strength to shake the powers of the Heavens. The following verses contain the troubling words that Jesus used when announcing what was to come.

“Just as it was in the days of Noah, so also will it be in the days of the Son of Man. People were eating, drinking, marrying and being given in marriage up to the day Noah entered the ark. Then the flood came and destroyed them all.” (Luke 17:26-27). Jesus predicted an enormous, unexpected destruction, stunning the human race in the form of a great flood, similar to what took place at the end of the Ice Age, between 10 and 12 thousand years, and drowned the cities of Atlantis, Yonaguni and Doggerland. This was the time of the biblical flood. The days of the Son of Man, since the first century, was always understood as the time when Jesus will physically return to the world in great glory. However, it is possible to believe that he was referring to the days when his words of global destruction would come true.

The same interpretation may be applied to the expression “sign of the Son of Man”: “Then the sign of the Son of Man will appear in Heaven, and then all the tribes of the Earth will mourn and they will see the Son of Man coming on the clouds of Heaven with power and great glory” (Matthew 24:30). For too long the Church understood this signal as a great luminous cross that would be seen in the sky, announcing the coming of Jesus. Today commentators say that this signal is Jesus Himself. If so, why not say it objectively? But if Jesus will descend to take over the world, why would all the tribes of the Earth mourn, if the righteous and saved also live in the world, and are awaiting the return of the Savior? It is assumed that the laments are only the repentant who did not accept Jesus, but it is not what the text wants to convey. Everyone will regret, just and sinners. According to the scholar R. N. Champlin, Ph.D., the Greek word “lament” more properly translated means “beating anxiously in the chest”. Then, the sign of the Son of Man is not Jesus descending from the clouds, but the destructive agent warned by Jesus, ie, the global abomination of desolation, Sedna, which will be seen shining next to the Sun, and everyone will mourn with what is to come.

Luke confirms that something terrible is coming from space – something that is obviously not Jesus: “People will faint from terror, apprehensive of what is coming on the world, for the heavenly bodies will be shaken.” (Luke 21:26). Once again, the destructive agent will appear, shaking the forces of nature. The term “powers of heaven” should be understood as the magnetic field of the Earth being shaken, taken from its balance, as Sedna approaches.

“For this is the time of punishment in fulfillment of all that has been written.” (Luke 21:22). All things that has been written is a clear reference to the stormy events that are to come and that were announced by the prophets of the Old Testament in such expressions as the Lord's Day, Great and Terrible Day of the Lord, Wrath of God, Day of Vengeance of the Lord among others. The origin of this revenge will come from Heaven where: "there will be signs in the sun, moon and stars. On Earth, distress of nations in perplexity at the roaring of the sea and waves." (Luke 21:25). As happened in the Biblical flood, there will be storms, lightning, thunder, heavy rains, tsunamis and rising of the sea. Islands and areas below sea level will flood, causing much death and destruction on the coast of continents, where there is a greater number of population.

"But in those days, following that distress, the sun will be darkened, and the moon will not give its light; the stars will fall from the sky, and the heavenly bodies will be shaken." (Mark 13:24-25). Jesus prophesies that something terrible will happen to our world. So terrible that the forces of space will be shaken. Something disturbing, as an amazing astronomic scenario of a celestial body appearing unexpectedly in Heaven. Sedna is the abomination of desolation that Jesus knew would one day appear. When that time comes, the day will darken, perhaps due to the Sun being hidden by the invading body. People will faint in terror of what will happen. The world will experience great distress and at this time the balance of the planet and the entire Solar System will be shaken by the arrival of Sedna. People will be perplexed by the roaring of the sea and the giant waves that will invade the coasts of many countries, and a meteor shower will be visible all over the world, launched by the invading star. It will be as though stars are falling from the sky.

The idea of a global cataclysm changing the geography of continents and causing mass death and destruction, something never seen before in human history, is commonly discarded and ignored. Most of those who condemn such a prediction are Christians, who choose to ignore this warning from Jesus: “because those will be days of distress unequalled from the beginning, when God created the world, until now—and never to be equaled again. If the Lord had not cut short those days, no one would survive. But for the sake of the elect, whom He has chosen, He has shortened them.” (Mark 13:19-20). A quick catastrophe but devastating, will go down in history of civilization. It is imprudent to ignore these warnings, because we are dealing with a national security issue, where countries are under the threat of disappearing.

The climax of the event will come in May or June 2017, when Sedna will eclipse the sun and slowly begin its journey of return. Thousands of asteroids that will accompany Sedna will be hurled towards the Earth and the reversal of the magnetic poles will begin. The outer core, which is composed of liquid iron, will start to rotate due to the magnetic induction exerted by the planetoid. The magnetosphere will weaken, the oceans will heat up and storms, hurricanes and tornadoes will happen in many parts of the world. At the same time, as the outer core moves, the friction with the mantle will increase the pressure below the Earth’s crust, resulting in an agitation of the tectonic plates. Volcanoes will explode, earthquakes will make cities everywhere shake and tsunamis will raze coastal cities to the ground.

The inclination of the Earth’s axes will change and the geographic poles will shift. Antarctica and Greenland will melt. The sea level will rise, threatening the south of England, Normandy and Holland, among other regions. The level of the Mediterranean Sea will also rise, fulfilling Jesus’ apocalyptic warning: “When ye shall see the abomination which shall not be located where it stands, let the reader understand, then let those who are in Judea flee to the mountains.” (Mark 13:14). So, those who are in Judea must flee to the mountains, which suggests the happening of a major tsunami or a rise in sea level, invading the region which is now the state of Israel.

21

JERUSALEM, THE FUTURE CAPITAL OF THE WORLD

The Jewish people are great. They have suffered many injustice over the years, but remained united, preserving their culture and their religious faith. The culture of most people of the great civilizations of the past is lost in time, except in India and in China, which are still preserved. However, the merit of the Jews is still greater, for managing to stay together even without an established state and scattered in different regions around the world. This is surprising, and shows why the Jewish people are so special. The desire to create the state of Israel begin with the birth of the Zionist movement, founded by Theodor Herzl, an Austrian journalist and writer, who wrote the book The Jewish State. With the end of World War I and the fall of the Ottoman Empire, the United Kingdom took control of Palestine and the region east of the Jordan River, known as Transjordan. In 1922, the British government divided the controlled territory into two mandates and gave Transjordan to be governed by the son of the Emir of Mecca, Prince Abdullah, an ally of the British. In 1946, the Emirate became totally independent, changing its name to the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan. The western side of the Jordan River, Palestine, remained under British control.

In the end of World War II, the United Nations General Assembly approved on November 29th, 1947, the Partition Plan for Palestine, establishing the creation of two states, one Jewish and one Arabic. The cities of Jerusalem and Bethlehem would remain under international control, through the administration of the United Nations. On May 14th, 1948, with the termination of the British mandate over Palestine, David Ben-Gurion declared the Independence of the state of Israel, while the British withdrew from Palestine, still in obedience to the UN resolution. Throughout the following day, the State of Israel was proclaimed in various parts of the territory granted by the Partition Plan, however, the neighboring Arab countries questioned the creation of Israel and decided to intervene. The armies of Egypt, Iraq, Lebanon, Syria and Jordan united against Israel. In the end of the war (1948-1949), Israel emerged victorious and even increased its territory of 55%, which was determined by the UN resolution, to 75% of Palestine. The remaining territory, the West Bank, was occupied by Jordan.

Following the conflict, a number of predominantly Arab cities were incorporated into Israel, resulting in the flight of 900,000 Palestinians, who took refuge in the Gaza Strip and the West Bank, the latter controlled by the Jordan army. Thus, began the Palestine issue, with thousands of refugees aimlessly and without a country. In the Six Day War (1967), Israel occupied the West Bank, where it remains today. The holy city of Jerusalem remains divided. Western Jerusalem lies in Israeli territory and the eastern part of the city, East Jerusalem remains officially under Israeli control, but it is mostly Arabic and claimed by the Palestinian National Authority to house the capital of a future Palestinian state.

On July 30th, 1980, the Israeli parliament approved the Jerusalem Law, which established the city of Jerusalem, completed and united, as the capital of Israel. In the same year, on August 20th, the Security Council of the United Nations adopted Resolution 478, which considered the Jerusalem Law null and a violation of international law. The United Nations does not recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel. Not even the US, the Jewish State main ally, recognizes Jerusalem as the capital of Israel. The American embassy, and the embassies of other countries are situated in Tel Aviv, except Costa Rica and El Salvador. Officially, the holy city of Jerusalem continues to belong to the United Nations. Therefore, Jerusalem is an international area, that belongs to all the countries of the world.

The Partition Plan for Palestine created by the UN anticipated the creation of a Jewish state, an Arab state, and the city of Jerusalem, which would be independent in the form of a corpus separatum, an internationalized territory, implanted in the state of Palestine, that has never officially existed. On March 1st, 1999, Theodor Wallau, German ambassador in Israel, sent a letter to the Israeli Foreign Minister at the time Ariel Sharon, reaffirming the support of the European Union for the internationalization of Jerusalem as a corpus separatum, on the same terms set out in Resolution 181 of the General Assembly of the United Nations.

On July 21st, 2003, the current president of Israel, Shimon Peres, who was also leader of the Israeli Workers Party in the same period, would have manifested a way out to the Palestinian issue to the Russian representatives who visited him. On the next day, the Israeli newspaper Maariv described that he proposed that Jerusalem be declared the capital of the world, as a way of resolving the impasse over who had sovereignty over East Jerusalem, claimed by both Israelis and Palestinians. The idea is not as crazy as it sounds and it is supported by the Catholic Church. The Vatican has always been in favor of the full implementation of the resolution that allowed a homeland for the Jewish people. Pope Pius XII was one of the first leaders of state to defend the autonomy of Jerusalem in 1949 in the encyclical *Redemptoris Nostri Cruciatu*s. Pope John XXIII, Paul VI and John Paul II shared this position.

The internationalization of Jerusalem will be the fulfillment of Jeremiah’s prophecy, that says: “At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord; and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem: neither shall they walk any more after the imagination of their evil heart.” (Jeremiah 3:17). The destiny of the holy city is to become capital of the world and the future headquarters of the United Nations, capital of the future Kingdom of God. From the Global Capital, Jerusalem, the destiny of nations will be decided for the benefit of everyone, governed by the Christian commandments of respect, tolerance and fraternity. In the following verse, Jeremiah prophesizes the return of his people to the land of their ancestors, as happened in 1948: “In those days the house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers.” (Jeremiah 3:18). The words of the prophet were specific, foreseeing the return of a people who came “from the land to the north”, or in other words Europe, following World War II.

WHAT	WHERE	HOW	WHEN
In those days the house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel, and they shall come together out of the land of the north to the land that I have given for an inheritance unto your fathers.	Jeremiah 3:18	Creation of state of Israel	1948
At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord; and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem: neither shall they walk any more after the imagination of their evil heart.	Jeremiah 3:17	Headquarters of United Nations in Jerusalem	Following Wrath of God

It is undeniable that the holy city is indivisible. In the book of Ezekiel we read: “Thus saith the Lord God; this is Jerusalem: I have set it in the midst of the nations and countries that are round about her.” (Ezekiel 5:5). Jerusalem is ground zero of the planet and its destiny is to be the center of the world. Resolution 181, approved on November 29th, 1947 by the General Assembly of the United Nations, stated: “The city of Jerusalem will be defined as a corpus separatum under a special international regime and shall be administered by the United Nations. The Advisory Council will perform the functions of an administrative Authority in the name of the United Nations”.

The situation of the Palestinian refugees will have to be solved one day. The two main points of disagreement are the borders of a Palestinian State and the sovereignty of Jerusalem. While agreement over borders seems a possibility, resolution of the issue of Jerusalem seems destined to remain stuck in an eternal impasse. If the Palestinians give up the eastern part of Jerusalem, the Dome of the Rock and the Al-Aqsa Mosque will be demolished for the construction of the Temple of Jerusalem, which would be an intolerable outrage to the Islamic world, and the possible spark for World War III. Fulfillment of Resolution 181 of the United Nations may solve the impasse over Jerusalem by making it a demilitarized, internationalized area, where all the nations of the world can come together. The New Jerusalem that John saw coming from Heaven (Revelations 21:2) symbolizes the holy city as a representative of our planet in a New Era. Therefore, according to Jeremiah, one day the holy city will belong neither to the Jews nor to the Palestinians. Jerusalem will be of all mankind. Jerusalem will be the future capital of Planet Earth.

CONCLUSION

The human race plans to conquer the planet Mars and sees an opportunity to discover a new Earth outside our Solar System. At the same time, terrorism continues to claim new victims. Something is very wrong in the world and things do not fit naturally over time. Hardly there will be a transition to a better world without pain or human suffering on a large scale. Before the new world is born, the labor pains are inevitable.

Thomas Malthus (1766-1834) foresaw a situation of demographic saturation given the mismatch between population growth and the availability of subsistence resources. His best known hypothesis argues that the population of the Earth grows in geometric progression, while food production grows arithmetically. In other words, the population grows more quickly than the food production. Therefore, It is reasonable to suggest that the world will not be able to sustain a human overpopulation, and some form of elimination must happen before the balance is done, for the good of the planet and its inhabitants.

Currently, there are 7 billion people in the world, and by 2050, a population of 9 billion is expected. Improvements in quality of life and advances in medicine, allowing the cure and treatment of many diseases, guarantee that the world will be overpopulated in 100 years. Natural resources are running out, and the industrial production able to meet a growing demand affects the balance of the environment and interferes with the climate. The planet will not support the increasing population and naturally will collapse by the end of this century. A segment of the population of poorer countries, especially African countries, are hungry and, in 40 years' time, another two billion people throughout the world will need to be fed. However, if the shortage of water has become worrying, how to increase the food production in the coming years, if there will be a lack of drinking water, according to the predictions of the experts on the subject?

Between the months May and October 1917, three Portuguese children witnessed the apparition of the Virgin Mary, who revealed three secrets. The last, known as the Third Secret of Fatima, is a tale of destruction so disturbing that it was kept secret for five decades. One of the children, Sister Lucia, wrote: "[...] we saw a Bishop dressed in white. We had the impression that it was the Holy Father. Other bishops, priests, religious men and women were going up a steep mountain, at the top of which there was a big cross of rough-hewn trunks as of a cork-tree with the bark; before reaching there the Holy Father passed through a big city half in ruins and half trembling with halting step, afflicted with pain and sorrow, He prayed for the souls of the corpses He met on His way; having reached the top of the mountain, on His knees at the foot of the big Cross He was killed by a group of soldiers who fired bullets and arrows at Him, and in the same way there died the other Bishops, one after another, Priests, men and women Religious, and various lay of people of different ranks and positions. [...]". The prophecy is an apocalyptic vision of the world in the future. The presence of soldiers reveals the real possibility that there will be world war, and the city half destroyed where the Holy Father, probably Pope Francis, walks is an allegorical vision of the scene of destruction that the planet will encounter. One half will be more destroyed than the other.

The Northern Hemisphere will suffer the disastrous effects of Sedna more than the Southern Hemisphere.

On May 13th, 2010, during the mass held for 500 thousand people on the Esplanade of the Shrine of Our Lady of Fatima, Pope Benedict XVI Emeritus expressed the wish that the prophecy of Fatima is carried out until 2017. At the end of the homily, he said: “May the seven years which separate us from the centenary of the apparitions hasten the announced triumph of the Immaculate Heart of Mary for the glory of the Holy Trinity”. Did he knew something regarding the Third Secret and the centenary of the apparition in 2017, and he could not reveal publicly? During the 20th Century, there were countless warnings and appeals from the Virgin Mary telling people to convert. Many supernatural phenomenon were observed in churches and Catholic communities throughout the world, such as images of Our Lady ”crying”, with water or blood coming from Her eyes. These miracles that still happen occasionally, are spiritual warnings of the pain and anguish which will overthrow the world, especially from waters. Tsunamis and floods will raze many regions and some will disappear under the waters, which will give a new geographic configuration to the planet.

Humankind has received many warning signs that something terrible is going to happen. The mysterious crop circles that often appear in the Northern Hemisphere, most commonly in Europe, are messages from an intelligence that lies beyond our physical world and seems to want to alert us to an imminent danger. On June 25th, 2013 a strange drawing was found in a field in Silbury Hill, Wiltshire, England, which contained a coded message. It was an hourglass circumscribed with four ancient Celtic characters. The sand that flows between the bulbs of the hourglass is running out, showing that time itself is coming to an end.

Written in Ogham, also known as the “Celtic language of the trees”, the message was deciphered by matching the characters of this language with the letters of our alphabet. The words read ARISE + MR + ICE. The most logical interpretation of this message is that a new Ice Age is almost upon us. Indeed, the last passage of Sedna near Earth 12 thousand years ago ended the Ice Age by the warming climate of North America and Eurasia. In this way, as described in Chapter 9 for the Nemesis star, the return of the planetoid Sedna will cause the displacement of the geographic poles with the subsequent cooling of the region to where the poles shall migrate, and the melting of Greenland and Antarctica. Possibly, the crop circles are suggesting that Europe will soon suffer from a tremendous cooling of the climate.

There is no completely satisfactory theory that could explain the causes of the glaciations in our planet. These cyclical climactic phenomenon have occurred throughout the history of the planet, as periods of intense cold, with an increase of glaciers in the poles and in the highest mountain peaks.

Between two glaciations the global temperature rises, characterizing the interglacial period, in which we are living today. The hypothesis of the origin of glaciations more accepted is the one by the Serbian geophysicist Milutin Milankovitch (1879 - 1958), which relates the climate to three astronomical factors.

1 - Variation of Earth's orbit and alteration of the perihelion (closest distance between the Sun and Earth), causing the Earth to receive more or less energy from the Sun in regular periods of 100,000 years.

2 - Oscillation in the angle of Earth's axis (obliquity of the ecliptic) between 21.5° and 24.5° in periods of 46,000 years.

3 - Precession of the Equinoxes. Circular motion of Earth's axis, making the Earth spin like a top. The complete cycle lasts about 25,800 years.

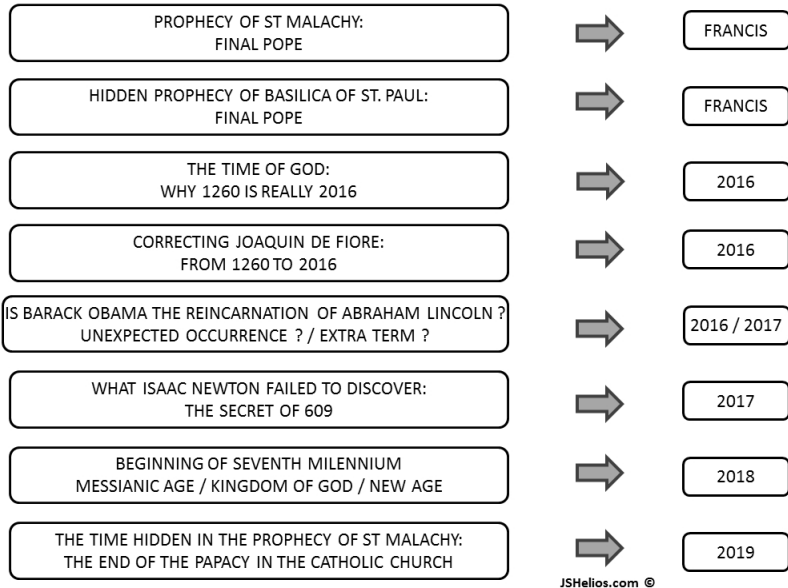

Only by admitting the existence of a star passing close to Earth and interfering with its rotation and orbit - remember the prophecy of Jesus about the powers of Heaven being shaken - can one explain the origin of the movement of the Precession of the Equinoxes, the oscillation in the angle of Earth's axis and the variation of the perihelion. In the final analysis, Sedna or another star, yet to be discovered, must be the true cause of the Ice Ages in our planet.

Therefore, a new Ice Age is about to start, and Europe and Asia should be the most affected continents by geological and climactic changes. Coincidence or not, nations whose population contains a large number of people who do not believe in God will be the most threatened, such as Sweden, Denmark, Norway, Finland, the Netherlands, Estonia, Belgium and others. The south of England, north of France, and the entire region of the Mediterranean Sea will be affected. In Asia, Japan and the Korean peninsula are under similar threat, along with other countries. The governments of these and other countries need to develop an emergency plan to save lives and preserve the technical, scientific and cultural knowledge of our civilization.

Nostradamus predicted that a “Monster” would be seen in the light of day when there was a solar eclipse, proving our analysis that an invading star would pass between the orbits of Earth and Venus. On August 21st, 2017, there will be a solar eclipse that will be completely visible from a strip of land that crosses the US from west to east, and which can also be partially visible from all of North America, Western Europe and Africa. Possibly, this is the eclipse of which the French seer referred to when he said: “When there is a solar eclipse, the monster will be seen in the light of day.” (Nostradamus, century 3, quatrain 34). A curious fact is that exactly 16 years before, on August 21st, 2001, crop circles appeared in a field in front of the radio telescope of the same name in Chilbolton, England. This crop circle is believed to have been created by aliens and represents a message from Arecibo, sent into space 26 years previously. Could it be mere coincidence, or a hidden warning, only now deciphered, on which the extraterrestrials will finally reveal themselves to help mankind at the peak of its suffering?

PROPHETIC CONVERGENCE IN THIS DECADE

One prophecy is curious, two prophecies are coincidence, but eight prophecies converging to this decade are worrisome.

“And this gospel of the kingdom will be preached in the whole world as a testimony to all nations, and then the end will come.”

(Jesus, Gospel of Matthew 24:14)

THE END

NOTES

1: Alongside the side aisles there are two other aisles, one on each side. After the fire of 1823, Pope Gregory XVI ordered that the whole series of Papal succession be recreated. As the empty medallions were running out, the rebuilding work was used to add five more medallions on the walls of the two outer aisles in which spaces were available. So, it were created 20 more empty medallions out of order that there were not in the original design of the Basilica. Certainly, these medallions did not participate of the hidden prophecy in the Basilica of St. Paul Outside the Walls.

2: In this chapter the period in parenthesis represents the papacy of the popes in question, and not the dates of birth and death.

3: This John XXIII (Baldassare Cossa Cardinal, Pope between 1410 and 1415), as he was considered anti-pope, he did not entered in the official list of the Church. For this reason, when Cardinal Angelo G. Roncalli, Pope between 1958 and 1963, chose the name John XXIII.

4: The beginnings of what we know today as The Bible Code began in the days of World War II, when a rabbi from Czechoslovakia called Weissmandel had the curiosity to select the first letter of the first chapter of Genesis, skipping 50 letters, and marking the following letter. He then skipped another 50 letters and marked the next letter. He did this twice more and noticed that the highlighted, equidistant letters formed the word TORAH. He repeated the experiment in the other four books of the Torah and the result was the same. Realizing that this could not be mere coincidence, he decided to write a short book about his discovery.

Fifty years later, the Israeli mathematician, Eliyahu Rips, professor at the University of Jerusalem, knew about Rabbi Weissmandel's experiment. With the help of other Jewish scholars, Professor Rips created a mathematical model to analyze the equidistant sequences of The Bible and designed a computer program to perform the calculations. After discovering some events codified into the Torah, Professor Eliyahu Rips met the journalist Michael Drosnin of the Washington Post, who began to investigate The Bible Code with his own computer. The program investigated only the text of the Torah, which represents the books of Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers and Deuteronomy. In this study, published in three books, Michael Drosnin discovered a series of facts, codified in the text, some of which had already taken place, and some of which were yet to come.

5: Life on Earth is a process of spiritual learning. When we commit serious mistakes in life, we are obliged to return to the physical world and pass through the same situations that led us to commit such mistakes. It is a test that God sets us to prove that we can really transform ourselves into new men. John Wilkes Booth committed a major mistake in his life: he murdered the president, Abraham Lincoln. His soul went through the phenomenon of death and certainly repented of the act. However, if he is currently reincarnated, he may still feel great hatred for the one who is the reincarnation of the man he murdered.

The former announcer of Fox News, Glenn Lee Beck, found fame in 2008, the same year in which Obama was elected. He is a conservative commentator and a fierce critic of Obama. In August 2010, he took a mob to the streets of Washington and the Lincoln Memorial to, in his words, “restore the honor” of the country. His news show on Fox News broke historic ratings records for that time, attracting the attention of more than five million viewers daily. In September 2009, his audience was greater than the sum of the audiences of the competing broadcasters programs. Beck accused the government of participating in a conspiracy to attack the individual freedom and that Obama was leading the country towards socialism. The video in which he asks a pastor if Obama is the antichrist was a huge success on YouTube, attracting thousands of viewers.

Analyzing the behavior of Glenn Beck, there is reason to suspect that he is the reincarnation of John Wilkes Booth. Both are conservatives and opposed to social reform. Glenn Beck is against reform of the health care system, and Booth was against the abolition of slavery. Another interesting fact is that Beck, as well as being famous, is a talented actor; just like Booth. One of his talents is to be theatrical, crying in front of the cameras and playing the comedian in comic scenes. In a show recorded in 2009, he simulated to drench one of the extras in gasoline to illustrate what Obama was doing to the country.

6: We can prove this hypothesis with a simple experiment. Take a small ball. With thumb and forefinger, grasp it by the poles. Observe the ball from above and, with the other hand, begin to spin it in an anti-clockwise direction. Without interrupting the rotation, turn the ball slowly until it is upside down. Observe the ball from above and see if it is spinning in a clockwise direction. If you are using a ball with a smooth surface, make markings on the ball so that you have a reference point and notice the rotation of the ball in the two situations. Therefore, while the rotation of the planet Venus is not inverted, the axis of rotation is inverted by almost 180°. In this way, Venus rotates in the same direction as the other planets, but “upside down”, giving the impression that the rotation is inverted. Currently, the axis of rotation is at an angle of 177°.

7: Greek word meaning present, or arrived. In Christian theology, it represents the return of Jesus to the world.

8: The 1,260 days in which the woman (Christianity) is protected (Revelations 12:5-6) also appear in Verse 14 in the form of a code. In the text, we read that the woman is supported for “a time, times and half a time”. Newton deciphered this code and said that a time was equal to 360 days, one year in the Hebrew calendar. Therefore, the calculation would be $360 + 720 + 180 = 1,260$ days.

9: The Gregorian calendar begins at year one and not at year zero, explaining the need to add a year to the difference.

10: This and various other themes related to prophecies are examined in the complete edition of this book.

11: The second letter of Peter said that a thousand years in the world was equivalent to one day for God, a clear reference to the sabbatical millennium: “But do not forget this one thing, dear friends: For the Lord a day is like a thousand years, and a thousand years are like a day.” (2 Peter 3:8).

12: Chico Xavier (1910-2002) was the most famous Brazilian medium, and produced 458 psychographic books and around ten thousand letters of souls from beyond the grave. His books sales, that exceeded 45 million copies, and its copyright was donated to a number of charitable institutions. In May 2011, Geraldo Lemos Neto, one of the medium's friend, when interviewed by Folha Espirita, revealed a prophecy that Chico Xavier had told him in 1986. For 25 years he kept secret one of the medium's beliefs: that a nuclear war could happen in 2019 and that the planet was likely to experience great disasters of mass death and major geological changes to the planet.

13: Samuel Doctorian, born as Armenian and naturalized as American pastor, had a prophetic vision of great catastrophes ravaging all the continents of the world during a visit to the island of Patmos in 1998. The prophecy is known as the Vision of the Five Angels. The angels showed to Doctorian a scenario of great destruction and catastrophes throughout the world, and described a nuclear war in the Middle East.

An apocalyptic scenario was also announced by the American pastor David Wilkerson (1931-2011), founder of the Teen Challenge ministry. In his book The Vision, the result of a prophetic experience that he had in 1973, he wrote: “a few minutes after the earthquake hits, the entire country will feel it and millions will be astonished and terrified. Thousands will be affected with a major loss of life and millions of dollars’ worth of damages. There will be smaller earthquakes, secondary seismic movements and tremors on an almost daily basis all over the world.”

Other notes:

www.jshelios.com/ebook-notes/final-countdown.htm

APPENDIX

GUIDE TO PREPARING FOR A GLOBAL CATASTROPHE

The Bible prophesies a catastrophic event of great magnitude and global scope, whose origin is the sky. The Book of Revelation (8:10-11) alerts to the emergence of a star, named Wormwood, which, blazing like a torch, will cause great destruction in the world. As explained in previous chapters, this is probably the destroyer star planetoid Sedna.

The Bible also says that no one will know the “time and date” of such an event. In fact, the holy book is correct, and the author of this book does not know either. The Final Countdown – What Isaac Newton Failed to Discover is the result of a genuine desire to study and analyze the biblical prophecies. The author is neither a prophet, nor a seer, but during his research he experienced a series of insights that, no one else had noticed before. However, the prediction of a planetary catastrophe occurring in this decade or more precisely in 2017 cannot be confirmed. The prophetic convergence detected in this study may be just a coincidence. Nevertheless, it is very likely that mankind will suffer this affliction at some time this century. If this happens, then this book is still have its usefulness.

When the truth is revealed, astronomers may attempt to minimize the seriousness of the fact not to cause panic among the population. However, once the suspicion of Sedna not being in its right position and will pass close to Earth is confirmed (six months before the closest approach, the planetoid could already be observed at night), then everyone should be prepared for the consequences described in this book. The following recommendations were developed by the author and are intended to governments, companies and citizens. It is not a prompt and definitive guide, but a basic and preliminary draft that can be improved and enriched by experts in different areas of human knowledge.

The region that will be punished the least lies under the South Atlantic Anomaly, in South America and the southern part of Africa. Those who can migrate to these regions before the apocalyptic climax should do so. However, even in this region there are areas of risk, such as the Pacific coast (earthquakes, tsunamis and volcanoes), the north and northeast coast of Brazil (tsunamis and an increase in sea levels) and eastern Africa (earthquakes and volcanoes). Islands throughout the world will be at risk. The northern hemisphere will be most affected as it has the greatest concentration of volcanoes and intersections between tectonic plates. Australia, despite being in the southern hemisphere, is in the Pacific “Ring of Fire” and as a result is likely to be affected in some way. There will be more human victims of the catastrophes in the north because it is more heavily populated than the southern hemisphere. As a result the current migratory flow of Latin Americans seeking opportunities in the United States, and African and Asian immigrants moving to Europe will be reversed, with North Americans migrating to South America and Europeans and Asians moving to the southern parts of Africa.

The United Nations will have a fundamental part to play in maintaining global order when chaos strikes. But if the organ takes our warning seriously, it will be able to create a relief plan for the population most at risk. Those who live in areas of risk from earthquakes, tsunamis, volcanoes, hurricanes, floods (regions below sea level) and fires must abandon these places when the existence of a mysterious star approaching our planet is confirmed. The mysterious crop circles, that appear inexplicably in the northern hemisphere, in particular in Europe and the United States, may be a message from a hidden source indicating the regions threatened by a rise in sea levels. The United Nations has a department dedicated to disasters (the United Nations International Strategy for Disaster Relief – UNISDR) which could organize a workgroup aiming to save lives and minimizing material losses.

FOR GOVERNMENTS:

For the good of everyone, governments must persuade universities and research agencies to investigate the planetoid Sedna more closely. The earlier we discover the truth, the more quickly we can prepare ourselves. If there is war progress anywhere in the world, the conflict should quickly be interrupted so that the armed forces can prepare a contingency plan to help the population. Governmental authorities need to know which are the areas of greatest risk in their territories in order to organize an evacuation plan when the fatal moment arrives. Those nations that are least affected should receive refugees with open doors. In the US, the Federal Emergency Management Agency – FEMA, is an example of how to prepare in case of unexpected disasters. Heads of state should be moved to a safe place to guarantee the governability of the nation. If there is no such safe place, the government should take shelter in a less affected country and make decisions from there to ensure the safety of people of its own country. If a country is left without a government and descends into chaos, the United Nations should take control of such country.

FOR COMPANIES AND INDUSTRIES:

The global financial and economic system is likely to collapse. Non-multinational companies will face bankruptcy as their factories are destroyed. While the physical property of the world may be lost, our knowledge must be preserved. Companies should make more than one backup of their files and store them in different places. Universities and research centers should do the same to safeguard the technical and scientific knowledge that is one of humanity's greatest treasures. When the authorities are able to estimate the period when the Earth will be closest to the destroyer star, companies should interrupt their activities and allow workers to remain with their families. Nuclear power plants should be deactivated to avoid a similar disaster which occurred at the Fukushima I Nuclear Plant during the tsunami on March 11th, 2011.

During the process of the magnetic inversion of the poles, the Earth's atmosphere will remain in a considerably weakened state, allowing electrically charged solar particles to reach the surface of the planet. The temperature of the oceans will increase, creating many storms. It is almost guaranteed that there will be an electrical blackout and companies will need to consider how to protect the electrical supply network in urban areas. All forms of communication will be affected and contingency plans will be required. Satellites will need to be protected from the effects of the weakening of the magnetosphere. Air travel will be interrupted. It will be extremely dangerous for transatlantic liners, cargo ships and petrol tankers to function due to the intense hurricane and tsunami activity.

FOR THE POPULATION:

Readers who identify with the message of this book should, after finishing it, seek to live in a state of personal spirituality, despite of their religious beliefs, as we are living in a period The Bible described as the final judgment of mankind. When the threat to Earth is confirmed, people should go to the countries of South America or the southern part of Africa, as has previously been explained. Those who bought or built bunkers fearing the end of the world on December 21st, 2012, will be able to use their shelters, since they are not in high risk areas. High altitude locations will be protected from tsunamis, but will be more exposed to solar rays, which will become extremely dangerous. The inhabitants of the northern hemisphere should avoid leaving home during the day, due to the intense solar radiation. Those that remain at home should stock up on food and water and other items listed in survival guides. It is advisable that the reader obtains one of these guides and prepares him or herself well in advance. It should also be remembered that in these days of crisis, which will last approximately six months, there will be a shortage of everything, including food, medicine, water, money, electrical power, communications, internet, TV, radio and fuel. In many locations everything will be rationed, or there will simply be nothing to buy, resulting in unprecedented social chaos and disorder in many cities in the northern hemisphere. Prepare yourself for the worst, hope for the best, and pray.

THE RETURN OF SEDNA

J. S. HELIOS

SYNOPSIS OF THE RETURN OF SEDNA

John Holson Smith, professor of Religious History at the University of New York, suffers from terrible migraines. After undergoing an experiment with tea made from herbs from the Amazon, he begins to experience visions and dreams that foresee terrible disasters for the planet. His mission is to warn as many people as possible about what is going to happen, but he must overcome the powerful and influential Catholic Priest Monsignor Octavius Bourjois, director of the Order of Revelation, who has ambitious plans when the chaos takes over the world.

John, however, is not alone. He can count on the help of Max and the support of his girlfriend, the beautiful psychologist Christine. The three will face members of the religious organization Bourjois and discover, during a meeting with the US president, something unthinkable: the planetoid Sedna is actually a dwarf star that is coming dangerously close to Earth. The natural disasters that are affecting the world are part of the influence of the magnetic field of Sedna upon the magnetosphere, causing the magnetic inversion of the poles. Did Jesus prophesize the appearance of Sedna threatening our civilization? The central theme of the book is based on the studies of prophecies described in the book The Final Countdown, by the same author.

